SAY HOWARD NESBIT BEGGED THAW FOR MONEY

"WE WILL FIGHT ON."
—Thaw's Wife and Mother.

"All my energies will be devoted to having my son freed."—Mrs. William Thaw.
"My husband was justified in killing Stanford White. He will be tried again and triumphantly acquitted. I am his true wife, and will be with him in his fight."—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw.

Upon These Women Chiefly Harry Thaw Must Rely for His Final Chance of Freedom. Both Declare To-day Their Hope of Acquittal on a Second Trial.

Remarkable Letter from Evelyn's Brother Given Out To-day by Thaw's Lawyers. Delmas Reported to Be Out of Case.

BY BOSTON AMERICAN LEASED WIRE.

NEW YORK, April 13.—That Howard Nesbit, the brother of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who sought every opportunity during the Thaw trial of scornfully belittling his sister's pathetic sacrifice by defending Stanford White, has written to Harry K. Thaw, asking a loan of $100 and swearing allegiance thereafter to the prisoner, is the sensational statement given out by Mr. Thaw's lawyers to-day.

In the remarkable letter which young Nesbit is alleged to have written, he declares he is in sore straits financially and even hints at suicide unless his brother-in-law repays the young man's betrayal of his sister by the desired loan.

TO DISCHARGE THAW LAWYERS.

That Thaw's lawyers will be discharged immediately after demand for the release of Stanford White's slayer on heavy bail is made Monday, is the declaration said to have been made by members of the Thaw family.

It is reported that Thaw's relatives are disgusted with the bungling manner in which his case was conducted from the time Gleason made his opening address. Dan O'Reilly, it is stated, is the only lawyer who has been retained. It is believed Hartridge may be added to the number.

Delphin M. Delmas, who was brought from California to free the prisoner by his eloquence, is now said to be thoroughly discredited.

The Thaw family believe that had the Western barrister based his plea not upon "dementia Americana" which jurors declare was not given a moment's consideration in deliberating upon a verdict, but on the ground of insanity, Thaw would have been acquitted.

It is reported that the fir mof Black, Olcott, Bruner & Bonynge, who originally took charge of Thaw's interests, but were dismissed by him because they insisted upon making a straight insanity defence, will defend him at his next trial.

FIGHT TO GET THAW ON BAIL.

A demand for the release of Harry K. Thaw upon bail will be made probably on Monday.

His attorneys were to-day preparing for this step. Thaw's family is prepared to offer bond in any sum to secure his release. District Attorney Jerome will vigorously oppose the release of Thaw, and it is believed any justice will decline to accept bail. The indications are Thaw will have to stay in the Tombs until his case is finally disposed of.

WRITES OF LOVE, ASKS LOAN.

"I love and cherish Florence as any brother should, and to my estimation you are now more than a hero," writes Howard Nesbit in the letter given out to-day by the Thaw attorneys.

These fond and endearing terms preceded a request for a loan of $100, and a veiled hint at suicide unless his request was granted.

"Dear Mr. Thaw:

"No doubt you will be surprised to see this letter from me, but I cannot help feel that it will be no more than right for me to make myself square with you and tell you fully how I feel toward you.

"I wish to impress upon you the fact that when Mr. White was shot that I thought it would be a heroic act on my part to stand by the man whose memory to me was so precious. I believed him to be the only one that was great, kind, good and honorable.

"White to Me a King."

"To me he was a king, and he won my childish affection by his kindness toward me. If he was a bad man I did not know it, for I was only a child and was and could have been easily deceived as to his real nature.

"When Jerome took my statement he only wanted to know all about you, White and Florence. I told him what Florence told me—or at least that was supposed to have told me. I will put it more strongly and say she never told me anything against you that would tend to hurt you in any way. I lied, thinking it would help the man I thought was so good.

"I Would Have Perjured Myself."

"After Florence told her story on the stand, believe me, I was with her from that time on—heart and soul—I never intended to say one word against her if put on the stand—I would have forgotten everything I knew—I would have perjured myself out and out. If you wish to call it perjury.

"I am not and was not afraid of Jerome. Another thing I wish you to bear in mind, and that is that I was influenced by artful and designing persons who urged me on to take the stand that I did. They are to be found in this city, not far away either.

"I love and cherish Florence as any brother should and it breaks my heart

HAVE YOU NOTICED

That the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN has the best LOCAL news of any paper in Boston?

It not only has the BEST, but it has ALL the news.

For instance:

To-morrow's AMERICAN will contain these articles:

AMAZING CONDITIONS IN THE SOMERVILLE POLICE FORCE. How city officials stand in with policemen, who not only fail to enforce the laws, but who actually shield men caught committing crimes. What Somerville needs is a good "Lexowing," and if we are not mistaken Somerville is pretty likely to get what it needs.

TRAFFIC IN SLAVE CHILDREN. Carried on right here in the eastern end of Massachusetts TO-DAY. How children are being imported by the hundreds from Greece and made to work at starvation wages in factories.

THE FACTS ABOUT THE SMALLPOX SITUATION. There is no use trying to conceal the real conditions. Public safety demands that the truth be known. We purpose to tell it.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE A STRIKE-BREAKER. Told by one of the men who was deceived into coming to Boston to help crush the Teamsters' Union. This is a surprising revelation of some of the methods employed in modern industrial warfare.

These are only a few of the things that you will have to buy the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN to find out about.

You will be interested in some new facts concerning the $5,000,000 conspiracy. But—H-S-T! It wouldn't do to tell you about that NOW. Somebody might overhear us and the plot would be foiled!

The real, deadly, overshadowing, awfully-awful, uxtry-uxtry conspiracy that you have to guard against to-morrow is a conspiracy on the part of the general public to buy up all of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICANS before you get out of bed and then you won't be able to get one.

THE WAY TO FOIL THAT CONSPIRACY IS TO ORDER YOUR PAPER TO-NIGHT.

to think I cannot see her. I want to see her and tell her how sorry I am. She would listen to me, I am sure.

"I am very, very unhappy—in fact, I have made myself sick worrying, and I cry at night and cannot rest. I am frank and sincere with you. I do not seek to hide my feelings.

"I believe you are right and justified in doing what you did and you are now in my estimation more than a hero. I look upon you now as a man fully sane and capable of holding your own in every crisis.

"I wrote to Florence, telling her how sorry I was. I told her I wanted t stay here in the city with my roommates from college, but who have since returned, but she seems to be somewhat bitter at me yet and will not see me.

ASKS FOR LOAN OF $100.

"I asked her to let me have some money—$100—if she could spare it, so that I could pay some debts which I was forced to contract while there, but she answered that she didn't have any money. And so I must appeal to you to help me. Perhaps I was wrong in coming here, but my parents are responsible for that. The fact that I refused to go on the stand against you and my sister should be enough to show you that I am true to your cause.

"I want the money to enable me to stay here until I can get a position and be independent of everybody else. Won't you help me? If you don't I will be forced to write home for money, and I don't want to do that.

"I am living at the St. Paul Hotel, Sixtieth street and Columbus avenue, and I owe money for my board. I also owe Assistant District Attorney Buckley $15, which I was forced to borrow from the clerk of the Hotel Martinique while the State kept me here. So you will see I am in a very bad box.

HINTS AT SUICIDE.

"If you fail me I don't know what I will do. I would rather kill myself than have to go to certain persons in this city forhelp, and I won't write home for the money. I have been so miserable at times that I have felt like ending it all. Please help me as I helped you by not going on the stand. Your sincerely,

"HOWARD NESBIT."

NEW COUNSEL TO BATTLE FOR HARRY THAW

NEW YORK, April 13.—A demand for the release of Harry K. Thaw upon bail, pending a retrial on the charge of killing Stanford White, will be made probably on Monday.

His attorneys were to-day preparing for this step. The prospect of having to remain in the Tombs until October or November, awaiting his turn for another trial, has upset Thaw terribly, and every effort will be made to secure his freedom until he again faces the jury.

Thaw's family is prepared to offer bond in any sum to secure his release. Such a demand is almost unprecedented, but the defendant's attorneys are prepared to argue that the bail they will offer is prohibitive of an attempt to run away on Thaw's part, while the notoriety which has attached to his case would make it almost impossible for him to escape to any point of the globe where he could not be found or brought back.

District Attorney Jerome will vigorously oppose the release of Thaw, and it is believed any justice will decline to accept bail. The indications are Thaw will have to stay in the Tombs until his case is finally disposed of.

Discredit Delmas' Plea.

Aside from its personal relations to Thaw, the most important feature of the disagreement is its showing that "dementia Americana" has no standing under the laws of this State. New York has rejected the "unwritten law." It is not likely that after Delmas' fiasco in attempting to foist it upon a New York jury the atempt will be repeated soon.

Every juror who will discuss the deliberation insists that the "justification plea" was utterly disregarded. Delmas' closing address therefore went wide of the mark.

To-day the little California barrister, who was preceded across the Rocky Mountains by the glowing reputation of laurels he had won on the Pacific coast, stands discredited with New Yorkers. The five jurors who supported Thaw did so under the conviction that he was insane when he killed White. Had Delmas made his direct appeal for freedom for his client on the ground of insanity it is generally believed the jury would have acquitted Thaw.

The fiasco of the "half-million defence" has disrupted the Thaw attorneys. Never at harmony, even while the trial was in progress, with the miserable showing made before the jury, the Thaw lawyers are openly attacking each other and each asserting that the blame rests upon the shoulders of some other man.

New Lawyers for Thaw.

When Thaw faces a jury again it is probable an entire new set of lawyers, with perhaps one or two exceptions, will represent him. These old lawyers, even if retained, will occupy a back seat. Thaw's relatives are disgusted with the bungling manner in which his case was conducted from the time Gleason made his opening address. Dan O'Reilly, it was stated last night, is the only lawyer who has been retained. It is believed Hartridge may be added to the number. As soon as the question of obtaining bail for Thaw is definitely settled, it is believed, the other lawyers will be given their "walking papers."

To-day the attorneys were vigorous in their denials that they had been released, but it is said that Mrs. William Thaw is determined upon a change.

It would not be surprising to see a switch back to the firm of Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge, who originally took charge of Thaw's interests, but were dismissed by him because they insisted upon making a straight insanity defence.

NEW YORKER SHOOTS WIFE AND TWO MEN

NEW YORK, April 13.—A serious shooting affray occurred early to-day in a Bronx apartment house, in which three persons were probably fatally wounded. Frank Mattheson, who lives at that address, wielded the revolver and emptied its contents into his wife Amaha, George Hoffman and Arthur Gansheiman.

"I'LL BE ACQUITTED YET"---HARRY THAW

This sketch of the slayer of Stanford White clearly shows the stubbornness that is Thaw's most distinctive trait. Carried to an extreme, this characteristic might develop into insanity. It was upon that very question the Thaw jury was hopelessly divided.

Call Out Big Police Details for the Strike to Guard 'Breakers'

JUDGE FALLON, DENYING "CALL DOWN," LAUDS WORK OF OFFICERS.

Non-union teamsters who are taking the place of strikers will be protected by the largest force of police that has yet been called for strike duty when they leave the South Boston stables for their quarters in "Fort Bradley," No. 161 Albany street, to-night.

Because of trouble at Dorchester avenue and Broadway last night, where the strike-breakers were followed by a large crowd and some stones were hurled, Captain Wescott of the Broadway station will have his force heavily increased.

One hundred extra police officers from various stations will be thrown into South Boston. A large detail of mounted men will patrol the streets. Around "Fort Bradley" and nearby streets Captain Cain of the Lagrange street station will have both sides of the street patrolled by an incresed force.

Guard Against Trouble.

"We are taking every precaution to prevent trouble," said Captain Wescott. "We want to be prepared for any emergency."

In the South Boston district court today, Henry Riley, a driver employed by Flanders & Company, who was arrested yesterday on the charge of profanity, failed to put in an appearance and was ordered defaulted. A. L. Flanders furnished the bonds for his release.

The case against John H. Condon who was also charged with profanity was continued until next Tuesday.

After the adjournment of court Judge Fallon called the newspaper men to his office and made this statement of his position in the hearing of strike cases:

Judge Lauds Police.

"Yesterday, after the business of the court was over, in view of the circumstances, I advised the police officers not to use the terms striker or strike-breaker when testifying in court. This advice, which I gave the officers, and which I know was received in the same spirit in which it was given, has been magnified by the reports in certain newspapers. I gave the police no 'call down.' They need none.

"I consider the conduct of the police officers, for efficiency in discharging their duties, for moderation and patience under trying circumstances, as worthy of commendation and not of a 'call down.'"

Every effort is being made by those in charge of the strike-breakers to prevent the wholesale desertions which the men threatened would occur to-day. It was rumored that two hundred of them would quit as soon as they could get enough of their pay to get back to New York.

Loses Big Contract.

The Master Teamsters got out about the same number of teams to-day that they have worked during the week.

One of the largest losses to a "struck" firm was reported in the business district to-day when it was announced that the Philadelphia boat teaming, which has been done by the firm of J. S. Hilliard & Son, had been turned over to George H. Hobbs, a master teamster not affected by the strike. The contract involves about twenty teams.

HEARING TO-DAY ON HARRIMAN LETTER THEFT

Examine Stenographer Who Confessed to Sale of Financier's Correspondence.

NEW YORK, April 13.—The hearing of Frank W. Hill, E. H. Harriman's former stenographer, who sold Harriman's letter to Sidney Webster in which the railroad magnate told of raising money for President's election, was resumed to-day in the Tombs police court. The hearing was in the private examination room.

Hill, who confessed to selling the letter which created the recent political explosion and called from the White House the declaration that a $5,000,000 fund to defeat President Roosevelt's policies is being raised by his enemies, was represented at the hearing by former Magistrate Ommen. Assistant District Attorney Krotel represented the State, and two of Harriman's lawyers were on hand to assist him.

Mr. Harriman was not present when the hearing began, but it was expected he would attend some time during the day.

He is the most important witness against him. Several other witnesses were on hand to testify against the stenographer. It was expected when the hearing began that it would be very complete and thorough and might take some time to complete.

ELEVATOR BOY MADE HERO BY SPANKING FEAR

Knew "Dad Would Deliver the Goods," So Ran Elevator to Save 10 Families in Fire.

"Hero? No, nothing like that," said Earl Mason, a fifteen-year-old elevator boy, who carried ten panic-stricken families in safety to the street through the smoke-filled Hotel Sanford at No. 1,521 Washington street, when a fire was raging in the cellar of the building.

"You see, I didn't stop to think whether there was any danger or not. I just met my dad coming in the front door on the fly, and he said: 'Earl, there's a fire down in the basement, and you just shoot that elevator up to the top floor before the smoke gets up there through the airshaft. Get Mrs. Gill and the others on the top down in the first trip, and then go back again to the other floors and bring them all down. I'm going to Dedham street to pull the fire alarm. Remember, if you lose your head and do any yelling there's a licking coming to you when you get home to-night. Quick now.'

"And he pushed me into the car and slammed the door after me, and you just bet the car flew up to the top.

"I didn't think about fire. I only remembered what my father said, and I know him well enough to understand that he meant it."

AUTO DESTROYED IN BLAZE AT DEDHAM

An automobile and two carriages were badly damaged and considerable stable property was destroyed when the barn owned by Mrs. A. W. Nickerson, Riverdale, Dedham, burned last night. The damage was about $2,000. It is supposed that the fire was caused by oily automobile rags.

ERIE'S EARNINGS OVER $5,000,000

NEW YORK, April 13.—The report of the Lake Erie and Western Railway for the year ended December 31 last, shows gross earnings $5,212,812, an increase of $175,517; net earnings, $1,439,582; a decrease of $2,560; surplus remaining after all charges and dividends, $7,868, a decrease of $10,444.

BACK BAY FOLK FIGHT HOSPITAL RUN BY WOMAN

On the gound that the presence of the private hospital in the vicinity has caused property to depreciate in value, residents of Bay State road appeared before the aldermanic Committee on Health to protest against the renewal of the hospital license to Dr. Elizabeth A. Riley, who has conducted an institution there for two years.

Those who appeared in protest were James M. Prendergast, Alfred W. Carr, Charles R. Evans, Sidney E. Shuman, former Attorney General A. E. Pillsbury, Eugene B. Hagar, C. D. Cookin and W. W. Darling. Everett W. Burdett appeared as counsel for the protestants.

Mr. Burdett said that a bill in equity was now in the courts seeking to prevent a continuance of the hospital on the ground that it violated the restrictions covering all land on the street.

Dr. Riley was represented by Thomas A. Mullen. The remonstrants were able to finish their case yesterday and Dr. Riley's side will be heard next Friday.

BALDWIN ON FOUL.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 13.—Matty Baldwin of Boston was awarded the decision on a foul in the seventh round of his fight with Jim Gelsmar, the Ghetto champ of Rochester, before the Dukelow A. C.

2 DEAD, ONE SERIOUSLY ILL FROM SPOTTED FEVER

Dedham Alarmed at Number of Plague Victims. Board of Health Organizes Battle With Disease.

Three cases of spotted fever and two deaths in the town of Dedham, reported within the last few days, have caused the members of the Board of Health to take extreme precautions to prevent a spread of the disease.

The dead are:

Frank Pratzzo, fifty-one years, Eastern avenue; ill a day and a half, died on Thursday.

Alfred Thornton, thirty-nine years, No. 259 Washington street; ill two weeks and a half, died Thursday.

Seriously ill:

Miss Mary Smith, Spruce street; ill one week.

Immediately after Dr. E. W. Finn, the town physician and member of the Board of Health, had been informed of the cases, he ordered immediate interment and caused all of the houses to be thoroughly fumigated.

Miss Smith has been completely isolated. Her condition is regarded as very serious.

"We are doing everything in our power to prevent a spread of the disease," said Dr. Finn to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "It is very contagious, but we have hopes that we shall hear of no more cases. The three that have already been discovered are the only ones that we know about and we do not believe there are any others."

$100,000 CABINET WORKS ARE BURNED

CHESTER, Pa., April 13.—The Keystone Cabinet Works, employing over 200 men, was totally destroyed by fire to-day. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss will reach $100,000, partially covered by insurance.

RUSSIA FACES PERSIA.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 13.—Caucasus advices say that a Russian army is being assembled on the Persian frontier for a demonstration. The Persian government is in a state of chaos.

HYPNOTIZED WIFE, TO PULL THE TOOTH

WINSTED, Conn, April 13.—Guy Hemingway of Lee has made a study of hypnotism for several years. His wife had a severe toothache, out feared to go to a dentist. Hemingway finally persuaded her to accompany him to a dentist's, where, after she was seated, he put her in a hypnotic condition and the tooth-puller did his work without causing the patient the slightest pain.

375 GUESTS TO BE PRESENT AT HEARST DINNER

NEW YORK, April 13.—Preparations for the complimentary dinner to be tendered William Randolph Hearst at the Savoy to-night by the New York County Committees Independence League were completed today. The number of guests who have already signified their intention of attending was 375, 100 more than had been expected.

Some of the principal speakers of the evening will be Justice Seabury, who will speak on "Non-Partisanship;" John Temple Graves on "Hearst's Value to Reform," and Justice Ford on "The Future of the Independence League."

$6,944 GIVEN MAINE MAN FOR FOOT'S LOSS

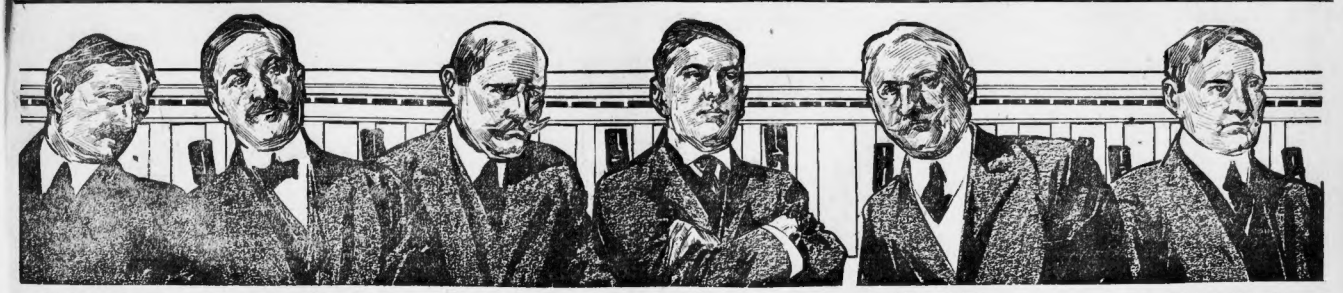

BATH, Me., April 13.—John Chaplin of Freeport was awarded a verdict of $6,944 by a Supreme Court jury in his suit against the Brunswick & Yarmouth Electric Railway for the loss of a foot.

KICKED BY HORSE; DANGEROUSLY HURT

While at work at a stable at No. 28 Shawmut avenue early to-day, James Wright of No. 42 Warren street, Roxbury, was kicked by a horse. He was removed to the City Hospital, where it is said that he is in a serious condition.

Verdict Barred by Quarrel, Says Juror

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 13.—"If it had not been for my difficulty with Juror Pfaff, which resulted in the breaking off of compromise negotiations, the jurors would have agreed on a verdict of manslaughter in the second degree—of that I am convinced."

This amazing statement was made by Juror Wilbur F. Steele at his home, No. 620 West One Hundred and Fifty-third street, to an AMERICAN reporter last night.

Mr. Steele then proceeded to tell a remarkable story of the proceedings in the jury room. He made it clear that the deliberations were the most sensational, the most acrimonious and the most picturesque of any that have ever marked the conclusion of a great murder trial in this city.

There were times when some of the jurors were near to blows. There were veiled charges and insinuations of undue influence being used.

The balloting, which Mr. Steele tells of tonight, shows how tightly the lines were drawn. Only one man really permanently changed sides, and that was Juror Denney. All the time Harney, Steele, Pink and Fraser stood out for acquittal and won over Dennee on the fifth ballot. Of the men for conviction, Pfaff was the most stubborn. He was for murder in the first degree first, last and all the time. The other six would always have been ready to compromise on a verdict in a lesser degree.

"PFAFF CAUSED CLASH."

The most dramatic incident was the personal clash between Steele and Pfaff. Juror Steele told all about this, but with some reluctance.

"Was the difficulty serious?" he was asked, Mr. Steele replied:

"If it had not been for the interference of Juror Fraser it might have been serious."

"What was the difficulty?"

"It was the result of persistent insulting insinuations on the part of Juror Pfaff against the minority of the jury, which had resolutely stood out for a verdict of not guilty on the ground of insanity. I was regarded by Pfaff as the spokesman for the minority, and made the principal object of his insinuations as to the good faith of those of the jury who could not see the evidence through his eyes.

"These insinuations began shortly after Juror Pfaff suggested that we begin deliberations with prayer, and discreetly promptly cast the first ballot to take away a man's life.

"When Pfaff discovered that there were members on the jury who did not share his views and would not cast votes with him to send Thaw to the electric chair, he became offensive, and as the voting and deliberations lengthened into hours and still no agreement, his allusions to the possibility of somebody on the jury having been "fixed" became so obnoxious that I was compelled to take him to task.

TOLD PFAFF TO QUIT INSINUATIONS.

"I told him in plain language that he must cease thinking that because a man did not see things as he saw them he must question the good faith of the other men. He saw that I meant what I said and that I would not tolerate his half-veiled insults any further, and he desisted. This occurred about 5:30 o'clock yesterday morning. A short time thereafter we went to the Broadway Central Hotel for breakfast.

"After breakfast I was in Juror Fraser's room, when Pfaff entered and something further was said about the matter, and my temper got the better of me and I struck Pfaff and would have floored him, but for the interference of Jurors Fraser and Brearley.

"Perhaps I was hasty," continued Mr. Steele, "but the provocation was great. I have never before had any man question my honesty and sincerity. I took an oath when I went on that jury to try the defendant according to the law and the evidence and to render my verdict on the law and evidence only.

"I was trying to perform my sworn duty and naturally resented, with all the spirit of my being, any insinuations that I was unduly influenced by any outside consideration in casting my vote for an acquittal.

"How was it that the difficulty prevented an agreement?" was the question.

PUT END TO NEGOTIATIONS.

"About the time it concerned the majority of the jury we were voting for manslaughter in the first degree; Juror Pfaff was the only juror who had voted for the death penalty on every ballot. He never changed his vote. However, when the difficulty occurred the majority of the jury had about prevailed upon him to vote for manslaughter and had made overtures to the five jurors who were voting for acquittal that we get together on the verdict of manslaughter in the second degree with a recommendation of mercy. Negotiations, however, were then broken off, and the agreement could not therefore be consummated. The members of the jury were a unit in condemning the unjust insinuations of Mr. Pfaff. However, before the jury was discharged Mr. Pfaff and myself shook hands, and, after apologies, agreed to forget the unpleasantness."

Juror Steele was asked concerning the deliberations of the jury, and replied:

"Those who voted for conviction believed that Harry Thaw was not insane at the time he killed White; those who voted for acquittal believed he was insane at that time. That is the whole thing in a nutshell. The so-called 'unwritten law' played absolutely no part in it and was not considered.

DISREGARDED EXPERTS.

"We gave the sanest consideration to the expert testimony. A majority of nine experts testifying that Thaw was insane and eight experts testifying that he was sane convinced us that the experts, perhaps, didn't know any more about it than we did.

"The final vote of seven to five did not necessarily mean that seven favored the death penalty, but that seven favored conviction of some degree of homicide."

"It is reported," the AMERICAN reporter stated to Mr. Steele, "that you were for years a very warm friend of Mr. Thaw's father. Is that so?"

"That is certainly not a fact," he replied. "I never knew any member of the Thaw family in my life until this trial, and any statement to the contrary is untrue."

"Did the jury believe the story of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw?" Mr. Steele was asked. He hesitated—then replied:

"I did. Others of the jury did not. However, whether or not her charges against White were true, the majority of the jury believed that she told it to Thaw as she told it on the stand, and that he believed it. It was this which finally caused Juror Dennee to change his vote to acquittal."

DECIDED BEFORE SPEECHES.

Mr. Steele gave this detailed description of the proceedings from the time time the jury retired:

"The minds of the twelve jurors were all made up when the evidence in the case was concluded, and the summing up by the counsel for the defendant and the District Attorney only strengthened the opinions of those who sided with them. It would not be amiss to say, as it is, perhaps, only fair to the jury, to have it understood, that the doctrine of 'dementia Americana' was never taken seriously by any of the jurors, and did not have the slightest weight in directing their opinions. No juror saw anything in the evidence given during the trial which could in any way warrant the consideration of the 'higher law' and those who voted in favor of acquittal were not directly influenced by the story told by Evelyn Thaw as a witness. Her recital, though impressive, was merely considered in connection with the proposition as to its possible effect on the mind of Thaw.

"In substance nearly all the twelve jurors believed that Thaw was guilty of murder, but most of those who voted in favor of acquittal did so on the ground that he was insane when he fired the bullets into the body of Stanford White on the night of June 25.

BELIEVED HIM INSANE.

"Those in favor of acquittal believed that he did not know the nature and quality of his act—that it was wrong, and that their opinion was founded more upon the letters and will of Thaw and his appearances in court than upon the testimony of any of the witnesses.

"When we went to the room in which we were confined, about 5 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, we immediately took up the consideration of the question in a formal way. No juror was aware of the opinion entertained by any other juror, for we had followed the direction of the judge strictly, and had not discussed he case with any conclusion in view at any time during the long trial.

"At 5:30 o'clock some one suggested the advisability of taking a ballot, in order to find out where we stood, and when the votes were counted the result was that eight of the jurors were in favor of a verdict of murder in the first degree and four were in favor of acquittal on the ground that Thaw was insane when he killed White.

"The men who voted in favor of the verdict which carried the death penalty were Foreman Deming B. Smith, George Pfaff, Charles H. Fecke, Henry C. Brearley, Charles O. Newton, Joseph B. Bolton and Bernard Gerstman. Those in favor of acquittal were Oscar A. Pink, Henry C. Harney, Malcom F. Fraser and Wilbur F. Steele. After a general period of discussion, Foreman Smith said:

COULD NOT CHANGE VIEWS.

"Now that there is a majority in favor of the conviction of the defendant, I think it would be well if those who hold a different opinion should give their reasons for their belief in order that there may be a discussion upon the matters concerning which we are at variance.

"Mr. Harney said that, speaking for himself, he was firmly convinced that Thaw was insane when he shot White, and that no argument could be advanced which could change that opinion. He said that his opinion was based upon the letters which Thaw had written in 1905, the letter to Anthony Comstock, written later, and the will and codicil made by Thaw the day before his marriage. Mr. Harney considered that no man in a normal mental state could have written such documents, and, further than that, Mr. Harney was impressed by the actual appearance of Thaw in court. Mr. Fraser, Mr. Steele and Mr. Pink gave their reasons for voting in favor of acquittal on the ground of insanity. Their views were practically the same as were entertained by Mr. Harney.

"Then followed a general discussion on the question of Thaw's mental condition, and those in favor of conviction argued along the lines that Thaw's actions, as testified to by the eye witnesses of the shooting, convinced them that he knew what he was doing and had an appreciation that in shooting White he was doing wrong and violating the law.

"The second ballot was taken at 6 o'clock Wednesday night, and when counted the result was eight for murder in the first degree and four for acquittal.

"We continued a general discussion concerning the various phases in the case during Wednesday night, in which all the jurors took part in the effort to convince by argument those who took a different view that they were wrong. This brought out clearly the exact state of mind of each of the jurors. Naturally the two factions, if they may be called such, had leaders. Mr. Pfaff led the forces for conviction, and Mr. Steele led those in favor of acquittal.

"The acquittal forces were persistent in the effort to win votes, and at their suggestion Judge Fitzgerald was requested to read that portion of his charge which considered the testimony of Doctors Evans and Wanner, the hypothetical question, and a request was made for the exhibits A to I, the letters of Thaw and the letter to Anthony Comstock.

"The third ballot, after a long discussion was taken about 4:30 p. m. on Thursday, after the jury had been deliberating about twenty-four hours, and the vote still remained as it had originally been cast, eight for conviction and four for acquittal.

"It became apparent at this time to those holding for the majority opinion, that no change could be made in the opinions of any of the jurors by arguments directed to getting an agreement upon the verdict of murder in the second degree or an acquittal on the ground of insanity.

"The question of a compromise verdict was then taken up and vigorously discussed pro and con. All of those in favor of the verdict of murder were willing to vote for a lesser degree of crime, provided the insanity men would change their opinions. The discussion was kept up for about an hour, and at 5:30 p. m. the fourth ballot was taken.

"The first break in the ranks of the majority came in the vote. Seven of the majority on this ballot in favor of conviction, while Mr. Dennee shifted to manslaughter in the first degree. The four jurors in the minority still held for an acquittal.

"After Mr. Dennee had shown that he was willing to change his opinion, the jurors holding to the insanity view made an onslaught on him by arguments, and he was urged to carefully study the documentary exhibits which had convinced the majority that Thaw was insane.

"While this argument was being conducted with considerable exhibition of heat and some display of temper, which was quite natural in view of the long confinement in the jury room, the feeling of responsibility and the inability to convince their fellows, the majority got together and made a counter attack in the effort to get an agreement upon a verdict for a lesser degree of crime.

"No suggestion was made of murder in the second degree, which carried with it life imprisonment, and the majority took the ground that it was willing, in order to reach an agreement, to find a verdict for manslaughter in the first degree.

"The only man who would not enter into this arrangement was Mr. Pfaff, who vigorously and persistently stood out in favor of murder in the first degree. When the fifth ballot was taken it became evident that the arguments of the minority had been effective and had made a break in the ranks of the majority.

"The ballot was taken at 6:20 p. m. Mr. Dennee voted in favor of acquittal, making five votes in Thaw's favor.

"Mr. Smith, Mr. Bolton, Mr. Fecke, Mr. Brearley, Mr. Newton and Mr. Gerstman voted in favor of manslaughter in the first degree, and Mr. Pfaff remained steadfast in his opinion and voted for murder in the first degree.

"The discussion after this was urged with acrimony, with five jurors trying to induce the other seven to agree to a verdict of acquittal, and the seven, with heated arguments and considerable show of temper, as was only natural, trying to convince the five it was their duty to accept the opinion of the majority, which had conceded a great deal, and agree upon a verdict which would save Thaw's life and give him imprisonment for a term of twenty years or less as punishment.

'HUSBAND FAILS TO UNDERSTAND ME,' SHE WROTE

Sued for Divorce, Wife of Wealthy Granite Man, Breaks Down on the Stand.

ADMITS SHE LEFT HIM

Failure on the part of her husband to understand her aims and ideals was the reason way Mrs Louis P. Palmer of Westford left him in May, 1902, with the declaration that she would never return, according to her own testimony in the East Cambridge Superior Court, where he is suing for divorce. On this occasion she went to her sister's house but finally returned home at her husband's request. Mr. Palmer, who is a wealthy granite quarry owner, alleges that his wife deserted him again in May, 1903. She took a trip to Europe, but never returned to his home, he said. She is contesting the divorce, declaring that she went to Europe for her health on her physician's order. Although she admitted deserting her husband in 1902 with the intention of never returning, she denied that she deserted him in 1903.

Mrs. Palmer broke down and cried bitterly a few minutes after she began her story. Judge Fessenden asked her attorney to put on another witness and allow her to regain her composure. She broke down and wept still harder after she resumed the stand and for a second time her testimony was interrupted by placing another witness on in her stead.

"Did Not Write."

"My wife deserted me in May, 1903," said Mr. Palmer on the witness stand. "She went to Europe with a party of friends, and never returned to my home. She did not write to me while abroad. I did not know she intended going until the afternoon of the day she left. My first intimation was when she was packing her trunks. I was willing that she should go away for a voyage, but had no idea that she intended to remain away for good. I accompanied her on the train to Boston and gave her a check for $200."

Miss Flora Palmer, the twenty-four-year-old daughter of Mr. Palmer by his first wife, corroborated her father. Miss Palmer is a school teacher in Westford.

Mrs. Palmer, whose maiden name was Marguerite Howe, on cross-examination of Attorney William H. Bent of Lowell, was asked "When did you make up your mind to leave your husband and never return?"

"I never made up my mind to leave him and never return," she replied.

"Didn't you write this letter to your husband in the Spring of 1902, and after placing it on his desk leave your home and go to your sister's home?" asked the lawyer, handing her several sheets of paper. "Yes, I did," responded Mrs. Palmer, after reading.

"At the time you wrote this letter did you mean what you wrote?" asked Lawyer Bent. After much parrying the witness reply: "Yes."

"Cannot Understand My Ideals."

The letter was as follows:

"Mr. Palmer—Just a line to say good-bye. I am sorry that I could not please you. God knows I have tried to. Unfortunately my disposition cannot agree with yours. My aims are not yours. My ideals you do not and cannot understand. Just say that I have gone away for a change.

"Do not on first impressions say things you will regret later. Think of your children, especially of Mark. He has been a good child to me and I shall miss him very much. If at any time you need any help—if you need a friend I shall be glad to be of service. Even if we are parted I may still be able to do some slight service.

"I leave my home with many regrets. Do not seek me, for I shall never return. Have Jennie and Flora for your helpers. If you only will, you can be happy with your children. Do not neglect your house and again I say, set a good example for Mark. The comfort of a son in one's later years is much for you to be thankful for.

"Again, I repeat, do not speak too hastily against me, for I have been true and faithful to you always—only craved for the things you could not or would not give me. My health, too, you know, has been a great trial to me. Take care of yourself, for your own sake, if not for others.

"Good-bye, yours sorrowfully,

"MARGUERITE."

"Would Never Return."

"Why did you write that letter and leave home in 1902?" Mrs. Palmer was asked.

"Because my husband did not speak to me for a whole week and because he taunted me about things I did not do," she replied. "He did not address me courteously when he did speak to me. He was against my studying music. This was my only dissipation and because he would not let me study music I became discouraged. I worked hard for him and his children and it discouraged me more to think that he did not appreciate what I did for him. Whenever he wanted me to go anywhere with him he never gave me time to dress properly."

"When you were on the steamer bound for Europe in 1903, didn't you write a letter to your sister on the steamship stationery in which you said: 'I shall never go back to him again?'" The letter was produced and she admitted she wrote the sentence referred to. She also admitted that while in Europe she did not write to her husband.

Mrs. Emma Howe Farberry of No. 4 Rockland street, Roxbury, sister of Mrs. Palmer, testified that she conducted the Howe vocal school, and that she went to Europe with her sister. Before the train left for New York she testified that Mr. Palmer said to his wife: "I hope I will never see you again. Don't write to me or your letters will return to you unopened."

"Hoped Not to See Her Again."

Dr. Howe, a Boylston street dentist, brother of Mrs. Palmer, testified that after the train pulled out for New York Mr. Palmer said to him:

"I hope I will never see her again. If she spends that $200 she can apply to the American consul for money to get home with. I think I am getting rid of her pretty cheap."

Judge Fessenden took the case under advisement and will announce his decision later.

AMATEURS ROASTED AT THE COLUMBIA

Brainstorms of all kinds and dimensions were turned loose at the Columbia last night in the amateur portion of the programme. Mr. and Mrs. Bowers of Cherry Valley, must be credited with the "honor" of putting the house in a frenzy with their uncanny song and their weird terpsichorean feats. Hudson Williams of Lynn got away with first honors, the second prize going to Fred Wright, both singers. Gertrude Healy of Roxbury, was next in favor. On account of the holiday, Thursday night of the coming week will be amateur night.

PRETTY MODEL HUNTS MAN TO SUE

Selma Beckstrom, who declares her feelings are hurt $10,000 worth, says Dudley promised to wed her and is trying to find him.

MODEL SEEKS DEFENDANT IN $10,000 SUIT

Selma Beckstrom, an artist's model, who lives in New York, has instructed her attorneys to make every effort to find either in Boston or its vicinity, Arthur Dudley, who has been named by her as defendant in a suit for $10,000 she has brought, alleging breach of promise to marry.

Miss Beckstrom said in New York today that Dudley had told her that his father was Professor Dudley of Newton, that he himself had studied for the ministry and that at one time he had held a small pastorate in Massachusetts. Efforts to find any trace of him in Newton have failed.

She said that she will introduce in court love letters which she said he had written to her before she discovered that, instead of keeping his promise to marry her, he had married a New York choir singer.

POWDER FOR HEADACHE PUT LIFE IN PERIL

Special to the Boston American.

LOWELL, April 13.—Unconscious from the effects of a headache power, which he took in a drugstore in Merrimas square, yesterday morning, Charles Loring, twenty-nine years old, is at St. John's Hospital and the doctors fear he will die. He became ill soon after he took the powder and within an hour was unconscious.

Two weeks ago Bridget Ann McDermott and her sister Winifred McDermott died after having taken headache powders. A rigid investigation of their deaths is being made by the police and as soon as a chemist who is analyzing the contents of their stomachs make his report the State Board of Health may be asked to take some action against the manufacturers of these powders.

The druggist who sold Loring the powder declared that it contained no ingredients that could be responsible for his condition.

GRAIN COMING; LINERS BACK ON BOSTON ROUTE

Because grain receipts are growing every day, Boston's export trade is picking up, and steamships that were taken off the Boston route a month ago are being put on again.

The Leyland liner Canadian, one of the boats taken from this port, will sail from here for Europe about June 1. The Cestrian, the second boat taken off by the Leyland Line, will put in an appearance here soon if the volume of export business continues to increase.

A month ago Leyland liners were leaving port so light that they looked top-heavy.

The Devonian is scheduled to sail for Liverpool April 17. She will carry 70,000 bushels of grain. The Toronto left Boston yesterday for Hull, Eng., via New York with 100,713 bushels of wheat. The Georgian, for London, carried 88,000 bushels of wheat and 17,000 bushels of corn.

For the week ending April 8 there was received at the Grand Junction, Mystic and Hoosac elevators 412,524 bushels of wheat and 362,565 bushels of corn.

BALK CALUMET GRAB; BIGELOW SCORES POINT

In the decision handed down by Judge Loyal E. Knappen of the United States District Court at Grand Rapids, Mich., in which he made permanent the temporary injunction restraining Calumet & Hecla interests from voting their stock or proxies in the Osceola Mining Company, at the annual meeting of the latter, for any other purpose than the adjournment of the annual meeting, Albert S. Bigelow of Boston, now president of the Osceola Company wins an important victory.

In this decision of the United States District Court the Calumet interests are prevented from electing a board of directors of the Osceola Company which would place the latter concern in their control and oust the Bigelow interests. The court interdicts the proposed meeting of the Osceola Company on April 16 or at any time until the dispute is finally settled by court.

Judge Knappen bases his decision on the Sherman anti-trust law, holding that the Calumet & Hecla people were clearly shown to have been trying to form a combination in restraint of trade. He holds that the laws of Michigan allowing mining companies to buy stock in other companies could not overrule the Federal law prohibiting it.

RUBBERS STRIKE; SAY PAY WAS CUT

LEOMINSTER, April 13.—The twenty-two rubbers in the employ of Newton & Merriam walked out yesterday because of what they assert is a reduction in wages of twenty-five cents per day, which affected twelve of them.

According to the firm, the men were notified that during the dull period, which probably would not continue over four weeks, men receiving $2.25 would be expected to work for $2. The firm states that it agreed that the higher rate would be restored just as soon as the condition of trade warranted it.

The matter was discussed at a meeting of the Rubbers' Union and a strike was agreed to.

GOVERNOR, IN MESSAGE, HITS THE RAILROADS

Would Appoint Unpaid Commission To Relieve Traffic Congestion in State.

Believing that an unpaid commission composed of disinterested citizens, unrestricted in scope and authorized to extend its study to any line of investigation bearing upon the commerce and industries of the State, should be appointed without delay in order that necessary betterments may be made in the way of railway transportation and the regulation of labor and capital, Governor Curtis Guild, in a special message to the Legislature, declares that the citizens of the State should cooperate in a renewed effort to build up Massachusetts' interests.

He decries the fact that Massachusetts capital is not spent in Massachusetts as much as it should be. He says savings bank deposits prove that there is money enough in the State, but it is not used.

Railroads and transportation companies, according to the Governor, have not provided equipment enough for the handling of increased business.

"In 1900, the year of the last national census, of total United States exports valued at $1,394,483,082," says the Governor, "but $484,846,235 represented manufactures. In 1906 out of total exports of $1,743,864,500 the sum of $686,023,169 represented manufactures. Massachusetts manufactures the very kind of goods that are wanted abroad. Cannot we ourselves at least do something to get the products of our workshops more cheaply from the shop to sea water? Can we not make sure that the port of shipment is a Massachusetts port?

"If, however, we are to export manufactures by Boston ships we must attract these ships by the guarantee of bulk freight for ballast. It is idle to seek for more shipments of goods over trunk tracks incapable of promptly forwarding and handling even the freight now offered to-day for shipment.

"It is true, however, that the export trade of Boston is not developing as fast as it should. It is true, also, that the great delay in the transportation of freight is a serious drawback to an even swifter development of commerce and manufactures."

WHILE HUSBAND 'PHONES, WIFE LEAPS IN LAKE

Special to the Boston American.

FITCHBURG, April 13.—Frustrated in an attempt at suicide yesterday afternoon, after a desperate struggle with her maid, who seized from her hand a razor with which she had cut her wrist, Mrs. W. C. Frear succeeded in her second trial last night, when she left the house, while her husband was at the telephone calling a physician, and sped through the snow to Whalom Lake, where she threw herself into the water and was drowned. Following her on the run, with a party of wealthy neighbors, tracking her footsteps in the snow, came her husband.

The Frears have lived at Whalom Park about three weeks, Mr. Frear coming to Fitchburg at that time to be manager of a five and ten-cent store. Mrs. Frear had been despondent since her arrival here.

Yesterday she succeeded in getting hold of a razor and had cut her wrist with it, before her maid detected what she was doing. Then the latter wrenched it away before she had inflicted a mortal wound.

About 9 o'clock in the evening, the condition of the woman became so serious that her husband decided to call in Dr. Bennett, and, while he was at the phone, she left the house by the back door and ran to the lake.

Her husband summoned aid and a searching party, consisting of Robert D. Gould, M. P. Babbitt, Arthur L. Goodnow, John Bath, John Ford and her husband, was organized. The party found footprints in the snow which took them to the Crocker landing near the foot of the lake, when they found a pair of shoes which were identified by Mr. Frear as worn by his wife. They continued the search, and a short distance from the shore found the body of Mrs. Frear floating in the water.

WIFE DEFENDS SLUMMING BY RECTOR MEARS

NEW YORK, April 13.—That the Rev. W. Howard Mears, assistant rector of St. Matthews's Protestant Episcopal Church, did no wrong when he went to a Tenderloin resort on a slumming tour, and that the church authorities made a mistake in deposing him from the ministry, is the opinion of the former clergyman's wife. He went on the slumming tour, she declares, to see for himself the things which he intended condemning in a campaign against vice.

"My husband," says Mrs. Mears, "became a leader of men by his originality and ability to get at the root and source of things. The value of such a work as Mr. Mears has from time to time in the last few years been engaged in, is that, from a point of sure knowledge, he is able to make statements relative to certain phases of life not commonly observed by people—phases that should be known in order to handle in a manner calculated to bring about the best results.

"Mr. Mears has seen and touched a condition which has enabled him to feel the great and pressing need for the support of strong men in furthering measures looking toward a city's righteousness. This need his inquiries have pressed home to him, and as he acquires strength and recognition among men in years to come the great fund of information now in process of accumulation will enable him, should he determine to engage in sociological work, to be a power to call men to the performance of their duty in handling the evils of a city."

MAJOR-GENRAL WADE RETIRES TO-MORROW

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Major-General James F. His present command is the Atlantic division, with headquarters at Governor's Island, N. Y.

MILLIONAIRE TO DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

COLUMBUS, O., April 13.—Dr. Oliver C. Haugh, the Dayton millionaire slayer, must die in the death chair next Friday. The State Board of Pardons has refused to interfere.

GREAT PEACE MEETING CALL BY MRS. EDDY

At the urgent solicitation of Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy a special meeting is to be held in the First Church of Christ, Scientist, at Falmouth and Norway streets at 7:30 o'clock to-morrow night. Mrs. Eddy, who is one of the foremost of the peace advocates of the world, in response to the suggestion that services be held in all churches in sympathy with the meeting of the National Arbitration and Peace Congress which is to convene in New York to-morrow night and continue for three days, requested that the Mother Christian Science church here hold such a meeting.

It is announced that the meeting will be addressed by John D. Long, ex-Governor of Massachusetts and former Secretary of the Navy; John L. Bates, ex-Governor of Massachusetts, and William Lloyd Garrison.

Devoting Life to Peace.

The following notice of the meeting was read at the Christian Science church last Wednesday night:

"The National Arbitration and Peace Congress will meet in New York, April 14-17 inclusive. The executive committee of that Congress has asked the churches of that city to hold services in connection therewith.

"Mrs. Eddy, who is devoting her life to the establishment of peace in the hearts of men, has deemed this a fitting occasion for her church in Boston to manifest its interest in this great movement.

"Upon her recommendation a meeting will be held next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock in this church to recognize the aims and purposes of the Congress. The public is cordially invited. The meeting will be non-sectarian and will be open to the general public."

Features of the Peace Congress which opens to-morrow evening in New York city are two great meetings which are to be held by women of that State and of the nation.

Noted Women to Speak.

On Tuesday morning, in Carnegie Hall, one of these meetings is to be presided over by Mrs. Anna G. Spencer, who represents the New York Society for Ethical Culture on the executive committee of the Congress.

At the meeting Mrs. Julius Ward Howe of Boston, Mrs. May Wright Sewell, Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead of Boston, Mrs. Helen M. Henrotin, Mary E. Wooley, Ph. D., Mrs. Frederick Nathan, Miss Jane Addams and William Archer and Sir Edward Edgar are to speak. A second meeting is to be held in Broadway Tabernacle on Wednesday morning to be presided over by Mrs. Lucia Mead of Boston.

WHIST TO AID POOR CHILDREN

The Home for Destitute Catholic Children will be enriched by a good sum realized from the proceeds of the annual charity party of the Twentieth Century Whist Club, held in the Hotel Somerset last night. The worthy object of the party and the pleasures of the whist, dancing and social brilliancy of the gathering combined to draw an attendance of 1,000 people. Many smart toilettes were worn in honor of the occasion, and both card rooms and dancing hall were gay with life and color.

The twenty women who compose this club attended to the various arrangements for entertaining the guests. In the card room 100 tables were laid. While whist was in progress at the tables dancing was enjoyed in the main hall by those who cared more for the enlivening waltz and two-step than for the more sedate competition at cards.

Mrs. Richard A. Lynch, president of the club, assisted by Mrs. James J. Costello received the guests. The full membership of the club is Mrs. Richard A. Lynch, president; Mrs. Daniel F. Coleman, treasurer; Mrs. P. J. Bonner, Mrs. James C. Coleman, Mrs. James J. Costello, Mrs. G. T. Culhane, Mrs. Simon J. Donovan, Mrs. Bert J. Dooley, Mrs. William J. Downing, Mrs. George E. Jennett, Mrs. William Lannigan, Mrs. Frank W. Lavery, Mrs. John W. Lavery, Mrs. John H. McGee, Mrs. Joseph F. McGreenery, Mrs. John Regan, Mrs. John H. Shea, Mrs. John A. Sullivan, Mrs. John J. CONRIED AFTER MOTTL.

MUNICH, Bavaria, April 13.—Herr Conried, the New York "opera king," has offered Felix Mottl, the noted singer, a large sum to appear in the Metropolitan Opera company next season.

August Bjorklund, Wife and Children, Killed in Ontario.

WORCESTER FAMILY OF FOUR WIPED OUT IN WRECK

August Bjorklund, With Wife and Two Children, Were Going to New Manitoba Home.

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, April 13.—The wiping out of existence of the entire Bjorklund family of Worcester, father, mother and two children, in the wreck of the Canadian Pacific passenger train near Chapleau, Ontario, on Thursday night, has plunged the whole Swedish colony of this city into right and twenty were injured, when several cars lurched from the track and rolling down a steep embankment plunged into a lake.

The Bjorklunds have lived here for several years and during that time had made many friends, especially among their fellow countrymen, of whom there is a large the deepest mourning to-day.

August L. Bjorklund, his wife and their two children, Rudolph and Laura, were on their way Westward to Winnipeg, Manitoba, where Mr. Bjorklund had just purchased a large farm and which they were to make their future home.

In the wreck, which was caused by a broken rail, fifteen persons were killed outcolony. For about a year Mr. Bjorklund has been in the Northwest and recently he bought the farm and built a comfortable home on it for his loved ones.

He came to Worcester last week for his family and on Monday, when they went to the station to start for their far Western home, a large crowd of their friends assembled there to bid them a safe journey and success.

FAILS TO KEEP PROMISE; MUST PAY HER $1,000

MANCHESTER, N. H., April 13.—After a sensational trial, Miss Carrie Sybil Cook has been given a verdict of $1,000 by a jury in Hillsborough County Superior Court, in her suit for breach of promise against R. Benjamin Reynolds of the Fremont House, Elm street. She sued for $6,000.

Miss Cook, who is a handsome woman, under forty, told the court that she first met Reynolds at a county fair in the Provinces in 1883 and that, as the acquaintance ripened, she gave her whole heart to him. She said that he proposed marriage and the date for their marriage was set for March in 1889, but the ceremony did not take place, because of reasons which he gave, which seemed plausible to her then. Eventually, she said, she was persuaded to assume the role of wife and was so introduced to his relatives and to hers also.

She related a visit to Reynolds in St. Albans, Vt., at which time she said she took her first glass of wine. After the second drink she remembered no more.

"Have you ben reading the Thaw trial?" asked the attorney for defence.

"Yes, I have read some of it," was her reply.

"I thought so," cried the lawyer.

Miss Cook said they came to Manchester, and she passed as Miss Reynolds until they quarreled and spearated in 1905, after living together for sixteen years. She resumed her maiden name, but a fourteen-year-old daughter retains the name of Reynolds.

In defence Reynolds denied that there had been talk of marriage between them and, in reply to her allegations that he abused her, stated that she frequently attacked him and hurled crockery at his head.

Letters purporting to have been written to Miss Cook by James Doyle, a South Boston barber, introduced by the defence, teemed with terms of endearment. Miss Cook admitted receiving these letters, but said they were written to a friend of hers, Virginia Laporte, who could not receive them in her own name, and stated they bore a private mark so that she would not open them.

STRIKERS FIND QUARRY WORK

MILFORD, April 13.—Granite workers, who have been on strike since last Monday because they were refused three cents more an hour and Saturday afternoons off, are leaving Milford, and by the middle of next week, if the strike is not settled, it is believed many of the strikers will be at work in quarries not many miles from their homes.

The quarries in Vermont, North Carolina and New York need men and the strikers say they will not have the least difficulty in securing employment at the wages they are demanding in Milford.

ROB SLEEPERS AND LUNCH IN NEXT ROOM

PORTLAND, Me., April 13.—Burglars entered the room where W. N. Jordan, a well known coal dealer, and his brother Robert were sleeping, took $165 from the trousers pockets beside the bed and a watch from underneath the pillow on which the former slept, packed a dress suit case full of clothes from the closet and then had lunch in another room without waking anyone in the house.

INDICT MAINE WOMAN WHO SLEW HUSBAND

MOULTON, Me., April 13.—Charging Juan B. Robens and Mrs. Edgar Dickinson with the murder of the latter's husband by shooting him at the Dickinson home at Smyrna Mills, October 18, 1906, indictments have been reported to the Grand Jury. The trial will begin next Wednesday.

The murder was considered one of the most brutal in Maine's criminal history. The officers allege that Robens did the shooting and that Mrs. Dickinson conspired with him.

LACK OF CASH DEFEATED HIS HEIRESS QUEST

English Adventurer, in Jail for Board, Says New York Society Is Graft for Foreigner.

WAS AFRAID OF A "LEMON"

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Captain Alexander Elphinston of the King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment of England, and cousin of the Marchioness of Anglesey, arrested and jailed for failure to pay his hotel bills, and languishing in default of bail in the West Side prison, confessed that he had utterly failed to cut the swath that he expected in New York society, and admitted that he had come to this country inadequately equipped with cash for a matrimonial campaign which he had fondly hoped would result in uniting him with one of America's wealthiest families.

He also made the mistake of falling in love with a pretty, but penniless, milliner.

In addition to this the young English adventurer declared that he had been badly treated by the immediate relatives of some of the young women to whom he had paid his court.

Fathers and Brothers Cold.

"Some of them," he said, "did not act as if they were glad to see me. I was astonished at this, as I have always, hitherto, succeeded in making myself agreeable. But there was a brutal air about the fathers and brothers of the young ladies to whom I was attentive, which would have discouraged anybody.

"I was introduced to some very nice girls, mind you. I met and danced and dined, and—yes—perhaps, I flirted a bit, too, mind you, with many charming young women."

The captain turned his leather wristlet containing his silver timepiece, thoughtfully, and let just the least little suggestion of a sigh escape him.

Never before from the lips of the principal in an international matrimonial enterprise have the cold-blooded details of the pursuit of the American heiress been revealed as they were yesterday by this handsome young Englishman. His financial backers grew cold because of his failure to make as rapid progress as they had expected, and failed him absolutely in the end.

How near he came to achieving his object before he fell in love with a penniless young woman, and lagged in his hunt for the woman with millions, Elphinston will not say.

New York a Place of Easy Graft.

But that he didn't lack for opportunity to mingle with women of wealth in New York society was laughingly confessed by the young Englishman, who said:

"I think, notwithstanding my defeat, that the city of New York presents the easiest graft for an enterprising foreigner to work of any city in the world.

"It is true that I came here with letters of introduction to a number of high-class New York families. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Lawrence, Dr. Allen Bartell, Mrs. Yerkes-Mizner, Richard Hudnut, E. G. Schermerhorn and Don Giovanni del Drago. I found it very easy, by keeping my name and connections as a cousin of Lord Elphinston and a nephew of the late Lord Dufferin, to increase at will my circle of acquaintances in society in this city. I had the entree to such clubs as the Union League, the Manhattan, the Army and Navy and the Lotus, and invitations were plentiful.

"I was entertained at many homes, including those of Mrs. John Hanan, Mrs. Yerkes-Mizner and Mrs. Isaac H. Lawrence. I was the guest of honor at an elaborate dinner given by Mrs. Hanan and was frequently entertained in the magnificent and hospitable homes of Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Yerkes-Mizner.

"After I had gotten into society I found it very easy to get credit for anything, provided always the glamour of my aristocratic name and connections was played for all it was worth.

"I attended balls and dinners and parties of all kinds, and ever I hunted for the American heiress who was to be the guerdon of the chase of which I was ashamed at heart.

"I have sat out upon the stairs with two score or more of the nicest girls in New York, but my lack of knowledge of the financial standing of their parents prevented me from pressing my suit to a finish upon the spot. Of course, a fellow can only be married once, and I was afraid of what you Americans call a 'lemon.'"

PLAN STEPS IN EDDY DEFENCE

In Boston yesterday, General Frank S. Streeter of Concord, N. H., personal counsel of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, and also counsel for General Mark N. Baker, Josiah E. Fernald and Archibald McLellan, the latter one of the trustees of Mrs. Eddy's estate under the deed of trust, conferred with Attorney-General Edwin G. Eastman of Exeter, N. H., representing the New Hampshire men named in the original suit of the "next friends" of Mrs. Eddy, and also with Samuel J. Elder and William A. Morse, Boston, attorneys for the Massachusetts defendants in the first suit. The attorneys yesterday agreed on the steps they are to take when the case comes up in the Superior Court in Concord, N. H., next Wednesday.

SUES BECAUSE OF COLOR LINE

FALL RIVER, April 13.—On the ground that she was discriminated against because of her color, Annie O. C. Lawrence has brought criminal proceedings against Charles E. Cook, manager of Sheedy's Theatre.

Mrs Lawrence and a friend wanted seats in a lower box in the theatre, but says they were told that, even if the chairs were unoccupied, the right to use them and been sold.

They refused the chance to see the performance from an upper box, and made complaint to the police.

WALKED 2 MILES FOR THAW NEWS; DIED

PORTLAND, Me., April 13.—Because he was so anxious to hear how the Thaw trial came out, Daniel Harmon, aged seventy-five, of Falmouth, although confined to the house by illness, insisted on walking two miles to North Deering last night to get a paper. He had just read the headlines when he fell dead in front of the newsstand.

Held Up Seven Hours on B. & A., Held-Ups Form Held-Up Club

Starts with 27 Members and About Every Man Who Ever Rode Over Road Is Eligible.

A "Held-up" Club, connected with the United States Travellers' Association, has been formed of travelling men who have at one time or another been held up on the Boston & Albany Division of the New York Central railroad.

Boston has six out of the twenty-seven charter members. The club was formed in Pittsfield Thursday, when twenty-seven travelling men, as mad as only a drummer knows how to be, were held up seven mortal hours on their way to Boston on account of a tie-up in the Boston & Albany's mysterious system, which worketh when and where it listeth.

When the travelling men had waited about four hours, had reiterated their plaint and also their ornamental opinions of the Boston & Albany, from the directorate down, some inspired drummer went about organizing the Held-up Club of the United Travellers' Association.

Six Hub Men in It.

The membership fee was established at ten cents, and soon the organizer had twenty-seven dimes and twenty-seven enthusiastic charter members, including himself. These charter members include the following Bostonians: W. C. Swift, of No. 319 Washington street; W. K. Sharpe, of No. 131 State street; W. P. Gesner, of No. 11 Union street; J. F. Johnson, A. Eames, of No. 18 Summer street, and S. E. Pratt, of No. 110 Federal street.

Other charter members include drummers from Holyoke, Worcester, New York and many other places on the map.

The pass-word of the club is "Train Going East." To give the grip you grasp the hand of a fellow-member and give a yank like an engineer pulling a throttle-lever. If the other man is a genuine member, he makes a noise like a grade crossing.

The object of this club is not to be held up on the Boston & Albany any oftener than necessary. The man being held up the least number of times in a year gets a prize of a Boston & Albany time table, which he is expected to donate to a hall of curios which the club is to found.

It is expected that the club will rapidly enlarge as the eligible list includes about every travelling man who ever rode over the Boston & Albany. In fact, a mere ticket on that road is considered as entitling a travelling man to the courtesies of the club, on the ground that he is eligible in prospect, if not in fact.

M'NEIL, CHIEF REVERE POLICE

The Revere Selectmen, at a meeting that lasted till an early hour to-day, elected William A. McNeil, formerly Chief of Police of Winthrop, as Chief of the Revere police.

Only one ballot was taken, but the subject was warmly discussed for hours in executive session. The other candidate was Frank E. Locke, a Revere man.

Chief McNeil, until a few weeks ago, had been at the head of the Winthrop police department for twelve years.

In the Second of a Series of Articles on "How to Be Beautiful," Famous Expert Tells How to Banish Wrinkles

The massage of the forehead should be done every night. Let the fingers travel across the little horizontal lines parallel with the eyes. These wrinkles should always be massaged from side to side.

For persons who frown in their sleep the plaster treatment is best. Smooth out the skin, and while it is stretched apply the plaster in strips half an inch wide. Do not crease the skin.

If the skin takes plaster well, it is a good thing to sleep with plasters applied two or three times a week. They banish wrinkles around the mouth.

Proper Treatment Kills Worst Foe to Beauty

WRINKLES are the worst foe to beauty. Therefore I am going to dwell deeply on this subject. To-day I shall discuss the necessities of the massage treatment.

There are various rules for the massage of the face. The first rule is that there should be a good cold cream or skin-food. Cold cream can be bought at every druggist's, and, as a rule, one can get a very good quality of cream. But it is cheaper to make it at home, and the woman who wants to do so can manufacture cold cream for a few cents, making enough to last her for three months, for it keeps indefinitely.

Cream Should Be Soft

In all massage the cold cream should be very soft indeed. And it is well for the woman who is massaging to stand the pot of cream in a basin of hot water. This will keep it in quite a liquid state. While it is soft the finger-tips are dipped in it, and it is quickly spread upon the skin and rubbed in.

Again, in massaging, one must remember that the strokes must be swift and light. Heavy massage is worse than useless, for it irritates the skin. The fingers should go over the skin quickly and lightly, and without any injury to the skin, which should not even be reddened.

Rub It in Well

The hands of the operator should be soft and the fingers deft. If you do your own massage you may regulate the strokes until they are just soft enough. The cream should be rubbed in until there is not a particle of it upon the face, which should feel smooth and soft as satin.

For the very deep wrinkles, those that have accumulated during the years, there are other treatments, and one of these is the plaster treatment. The skin is massaged once a day, and at night it is treated with plasters to keep the wrinkles from returning.

The Plaster Treatment

There are people who frown in their sleep, and for these the plaster treatment is best. Take the skin and smooth it out with the finger-tips, and, while it is stretched smooth, apply the plaster in strips. The plaster should be cut half an inch wide, and should be applied very carefully so as not to crease the skin in putting it on.

At first it should not be left on more than a couple of hours, as there are skins that cannot bear the irritation of the plaster, but if the skin takes it well it is a good thing to sleep with the plasters applied two or three nights a week. This method is used for parentheses around the mouth, usually called laughing wrinkles.

To Massage Forehead

One way to massage the forehead not treated of in the first article is from side to side, stroking the wrinkles that run across the forehead. And with this there should also be an up-and-down motion to run counter to the wrinkles.

Remember, in massaging, never to run right in the line of the wrinkles, but always across them.

Famous Dentist Tells How to Take Care of the Teeth

(The following is the third of a series of articles prepared for the BOSTON AMERICAN by a dentist who stands at the very top of his profession in the United States. In this series of short, condensed articles he will give to the public information that will be of permanent value to them and to their children, if they will be guided by it.)

III.

IN order to masticate thoroughly it is absolutely essential that the teeth should be in good condition, and in this both their integrity and cleanliness are included.

A decayed tooth means impaired service, and a dirty one a tainted breath.

Food is kept instinctively from the side where the decayed tooth is, and, since nature insists on removing useless organs, it soon comes about that the gums soften, become spongy and inflamed, the teeth loosen and finally fall out.

In the meantime every breath taken is germ-laden and carries into the lungs not health-giving, pure air, but poison, to be absorbed and passed on to the remotest tissues.

The food eaten, too, becomes thoroughly impregnated with these germs, and, while it is true that most of them are killed in the stomach, yet they are kept alive long enough to exert an irritating influence on the coats of the stomach, which, if long enough continued, must lead to some form of gastritis.

A person careless of his own health will, of course, be unaffected by the discomfort his bad breath causes to those who are obliged to associate with him, and advice to him will be like pouring water on a duck's back.

Start by having your teeth put into perfect condition; then try and keep them so by regular and intelligent care.

Use of Brush

HOW often to brush them, what kind of brush to use, the tooth powder and antiseptic to be employed and the kind of toothpick and dental floss used are of the utmost importance.

It would be useless to say you must brush your teeth five times a day, namely, after rising, after each meal and again on retiring. Few persons are so situated that such a course would be possible.

In the latter place, waxed dental floss should take the place of the brush after one meal at least. This waxed dental floss may be bought at any drug store. It is of the greatest value to the teeth. It should be used in place of toothpicks, which are harmful. IT SHOULD, OF COURSE, NOT BE USED IN PRESENCE OF OTHERS.

But everyone can manage to use a brush and powder at least twice a day. At night the teeth should receive the most careful cleaning, since during the long hours of rest particles of food will have the best opportunity to do the most harm.

Most persons err in the selection of a tooth brush. Most brushes in the market are too stiff and too large.

The Ideal Brush

THE ideal brush should have soft bristles ranging from one-fourth of an inch in length at the tip to one-half of an inch at end or heel.

This will permit the brush to pass freely over all surfaces of the teeth and not cause bruising of the soft parts in the endeavor to get back far enough to cover the last teeth.

One reason why the manufacturers continue making large, stiff brushes is because the people demand them.

The writer has spent hours watching people buying tooth brushes at a counter. A tray is placed before the purchaser and he at once dives into it; the small ones are pushed aside without a second glance, finally a handful of what would easily pass for fair-sized nail brushes have been culled, and from these the largest and stiffest is chosen.

Such a weapon if habitually used can only do harm, not to the soft tissues alone, but to the teeth as well.

(The good manufacturer of tooth brushes makes invariably the right kind of a brush, if you will select it from his stock. Pick out the smaller brushes as described, and those with softer bristles. You are not getting your money's worth if you get something that hurts your gums.

Remember that life insurance of the practical kind consists in

A good soft tooth brush.

A good tooth powder.

A good tooth wash—all of them used at least twice every day.)

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady nineteen years of age, and for the past year and a half have been keeping company with a young man eight months my junior. He is of a very jealous disposition and rather good looking. He has asked me to become his wife, and I hesitate because I do not thing we could get along on our combined income, his salary being $8 at present and mine $6. Now, Miss Fairfax, we are both economical, being brought up by struggling parents. Still $14 seems a small amount for two people to live on. He has said that if I do not marry him now he will get someone else. He is one of those people who believe in working themselves up to a happy and comfortable old age with the woman they love. Kindly advise me, Miss Fairfax, as my mother has advised me to ask you. L. K.

YOU are too young to marry yet, especially the man, and you would do much better to wait a few years and save your money in the meantime. If he is jealous it is better to wait a while before marrying him. Sometimes a jealous husband makes a very unhappy home. If he loves you he will wait a year or so for you.

TWIXT LOVE & FRIENDSHIP

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a boy of eighteen. Some time ago, while out with a friend of mine, we were introduced to a couple of young ladies whom we have been going with for some time. My friend has been going with one young lady and I with the other. I care very much more for the young lady my friend goes with than for the one I go with. I know she cares a lot for me also, even more than she does for my friend. Lately she asked me to call at her house, which, although I would like very much to, I would not like to do if it would not be acting fair to my friend. Do you think it would be right for me? He says he cares a lot for her, although, as I said, I do, too. R. H. V.

UNLESS you feel that you are really in love with her I think you would be wiser to keep away from her. Of course if you really care and she cares you are not bound in any way to refrain from telling her of your love. But whatever course you decide upon be open and above board. Do not deceive your friend.

DON'T BE TEASED

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl and would like your kind advice on a matter of friendship. Some time ago I met a young man of about my age, and I think a great deal of him. About two months ago he introduced me to a friend of his, and every time I see him he teases me about his friend. I like this young man very much, but it is very annoying to be teased all the time. How can I stop this and keep both of them as friends? AGNES.

THE quickest way to stop his teasing is to pay no attention to it. When he sees that you do not care he will soon stop it.

A SENSIBLE YOUNG MAN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am perplexed by the manner in which my gentleman friend acts toward me. We are not engaged. He calls to see me about four or five times a week, but insists on leaving at 10 o'clock, and whenever I request him to stay longer he pleads he must go to business early.

Now, my dear Miss Fairfax, do you think he treats me right? He only lives two doors from me and does not have to go to business before 7 o'clock. We have had several quarrels over this and the last time he didn't call to see me for three days. Don't you think his love is growing cold? Would you advise me to waste any time on him when I know others are dying to keep company with me? He is a blonde and I am a brunette. Do they, as a general rule, agree together? L. L.

MY dear, I thing he is an extremely sensible young man, and you are very unreasonable if you try to force him to stay later than he wants to. Where is your pride? If he has to be at business as early as 7 o'clock he would be very foolish to stay later than 10. Be a sensible girl and don't lose a good friend for such a trifle.

WHAT SECTION HAS PRETTIEST BABIES AND WHY?

THE Dorchester claim to superior babies is hotly contested again by an indignant Cambridge parent.

This argument over infants was precipitated by a letter written by a Dorchester mother to the Prize Baby Editor of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

"Dorchester Mother" wrote that Dorchester babies surpassed other babies of Greater Boston, especially those of Cambridge and Somerville. The argument waxed warm, other sections put forth their claims. But the three districts in the original dispute have become particularly zealous.

In connection with these arguments, it would be interesting if the disputants would state their opinions as to what neighborhood advantages make their babies so much better.

The latest Cambridge side of the question is as follows:

EDITOR PRIZE BABY CONTEST:

Dorchester parents can't make their babies any prettier by writing so many letters. And they can't make them as pretty as Cambridge babies if they write forever. In health, beauty and intelligence the Cambridge infant is better than the Dorchester one. I have lived in Dorchester. Why, when I moved over to Cambridge, my babies began to improve in looks. I don't know whether it's the air or what. "JAMES K."

Cambridge.

Newton and South Boston wish to be heard in the baby argument, too, as shown by the following letters:

What Have Mothers to Say About It?

ARE the babies of any one section, taken as a whole, prettier than babies of other cities or towns about Boston? Mothers of Greater Boston are invited to write out their views on this interesting question, giving reasons for their opinions. Letters should be addressed to Editor Home Magazine, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston.

EDITOR PRIZE BABY CONTEST:

I was greatly pleased to see my little girl's name in the paper Sunday, as I felt she had been overlooked, as my little boy's name was in. My little girl is a dear, and I felt badly that her name did not appear. I am sorry they could not win one of the prizes, but wish the best of luck for those who did.

I have read that the mothers of Somerville and Dorchester think their babies are the prettiest. But how about the South Boston babies? I think they can come up to the Dorchester and Somerville babies, having two babies of my own. Yours in favor of the South Boston babies,

MRS. DELIA E. KENNEALLY.

No. 606 East Sixth street, South Boston.

EDITOR PRIZE BABY CONTEST:

Having read the arguments about the beauty of babies in Somerville and Dorchester, I think I would like to put in a word for the Newton babies. I see just as many pretty babies here as in either of these two places, and I have not seen so many printed in the contest from these places at that. "NEWTON MOTHER."

Newton.

"THE BRACEBRIDGE DIAMONDS"

CHAPTER XCI.—Continued

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

AS he had a rather honest face into the bargain Frank at once said:

"Very well. I am prepared at once to hand you this $40, in addition to the $5 I have already given you. You will divide this money between yourself and your sister in any way you think fit. If you fulfil your part of the agreement to my satisfaction, I will send you $100 more.

"Now this is what I require: I want to know the man's name, and the names, if possible, of his visitors, what letters he receives, and where posted. And should you sister notice anything particular about the man's baggage or objects casually lying about in his rooms, well—you quite understand what I mean?

"Absolutely."

Agreed!

"Well, above all, I should like to have his movements followed. You doubtless could manage that."

"I have already thought that out. I have a lad at home, out of a job at present, and sharp as a needle."

"Good," Frank said. "And is he on good terms with his aunt?"

"Perfectly good terms. Indeed, she is very fond of him."

"So much the better; but don't stint him in the way of expenses. He may have to take a cab occasionally, and there are many other little incidentals, you know."

"I understand," said the cabman.

"And, finally," Frank added, "I want you to send me a brief written report every day, whether anything turns up or not—just the bare facts. It will not take you many minutes to write. Now, what do you say to the proposal? Accepted or not?"

"Accepted," was the reply. "Any man who trusts me as you do—and there are not many that would trust a New York cabby—I don't know why—well, I'll treat him as he treats me. What you wish me to do shall be done. I can't say more than that."

"My good fellow," Frank returned, with a smile. "I don't want you to say more than that. So shove these notes into your pocket and after we have had another drink I want you to drive down Twenty-sixth street and quietly point out to me No. 549."

This in due course Vail did, but nothing came of it, as there was little in the appearance of No. 549 to differentiate it from the adjoining buildings. Frank made a mental note of its position and surroundings, however, then drove back to the hotel, where he parted with John Vail, a most capable and honest man.

CHAPTER XCII.

The Lost Paper

AFTER John Vail had driven away from the hotel Frank went to his room and again took from his pocket the mysterious document which Mueller had dropped in front of the safe. He had looked at it long enough before to see that it was not the missing portion of the map, but an entirely different document.

It was written, Frank found upon examination, in a language and character which he hastily assumed to be Russian, and his purpose now, quickened as it was by the cabman's narrative of what had occurred, was to ascertain the name and address of an interpreter.

He made his wants known at the office of the hotel, when the clerk at once said:

"Certainly, sir. We have a Russian waiter here—a very intelligent man. Shall I send for him?"

"Tell him to come up to my room in about half an hour," Frank replied. "I am leaving to-night and want to get away in about an hour."

A clean-shaven, fair-complexioned young man entered his room in a few moments and, bowing, said:

"I understand that monsieur desires me to translate some document from the Russian."

"If it be Russian," Frank answered, "you will be able to inform me on that point," and he handed him the document in question.

He had not read a dozen lines before all the suavity departed from his attitude and with a white, stern face he demanded:

"Why do you show me this?"

Warning

Resenting his manner, Frank said with all the haughtiness he could command:

"Simply because I wish to have it translated, that is all."

"Then you do not know—"

"I know nothing of its contents, or I would not ask you to translate it. That fact ought to be self-evident."

"Pardon my brusqueness, sir," he said, lowering his voice and now speaking in perfect English, "but this document has given me a great shock, and you may needs be thankful that you are unacquainted with its contents. But how on earth, sir, if you will kindly permit the familiarity, did such a document as this come into your possession?"

"The answer is simple enough. I picked it up last evening in front of an uptown hotel. Why do you hesitate to tell me what it contains?"

"I dare not, sir. It is too terrible for words. If through any mischance this document had been found upon you, your life might not have been worth an hour's purchase."

This was startling enough, in all conscience, but Frank felt annoyed all the same, for such a waiter he had never met before, and the suspicion at once awoke in his mind that he was no waiter at all except in name. He resented his assumption of familiarity under that guise. That he was a man of education was a fact that leaped to the eyes, as the French proverb goes, and Frank began to regret that he had not besought the services of a translator elsewhere.

While these reflections were coursing through his mind the waiter read the document through to the end.

"That," Frank said at last, "is my property for the present. If you are unwilling to translate it, be good enough to give it me back." The man did so, remarking at the same time: "I wouldn't carry that about with you, sir, if I were you. It would be much safer to put a match to it at once, or"—and he lowered his voice—"assuming, as I must, that you are in perfect ignorance of its purport, and it therefore cannot be of the slightest possible use to you, I might suggest a more profitable means of getting rid of it than by ——"

"Which is?"

"Well, sir, I chance to know a man who within an hour will give you, say, $5,000 in exchange for the document."

Frank turned upon him at once.

"You are no waiter," he said. "Your language—your whole manner betrays you. You are a——"

"I Am Not a Spy."

The man lifted his hand.

"Don't say it," said he. "It is false. I am not a Russian spy, though I frankly admit that I am not, except for the time being, to suit a purpose of my own, a waiter." He paused for a second. "If I really thought——"

"Thought what?" Frank asked. "Out with it."

"That you could be trusted, sir."

"In what respect?" Bracebridge asked. "You speak English remarkably well. Tell me, without any ambiguity, or, in other words, straight from your chest, what the deuce you really do mean."

"I have a certain document in my possession, for which some friend of yours around the corner is willing to pay me $5,000. Never mind 'the friend around the corner.' I have dismissed that gentleman from my mind. I am not selling this document.

"All the same, I might possibly make a deal with you should you be in a position to give me certain information I am desirous to possess——"

Beauty Don'ts

DON'T dry your face in a hurry. A quick, anyhow rub coarsens the skin and injures its beauty.

Don't eat your meals quickly. This causes indigestion and a red nose.

Don't worry. Other people's troubles are quite as bad as yours.

Don't read till midnight. One hour's sleep before 12 is worth four afterward.

Don't shut your bedroom window. Fresh air is necessary for health.

Don't expect physic and tonics to keep you well if you neglect the laws of health and hygiene.

Don't wear pads or additional tails of hair and curls, unless absolutely necessary. Anything that prevents light and air getting to the roots of the hair is extremely bad.

Don't attempt to restore gray or faded hair yourself; it is best to leave it entirely alone. If dyeing is desirable have it done by skilled hands.

Don't have the combings of five or six years made up, as hair changes so in color and texture that the tail is sure not to match; rather buy a new switch to supplement nature's scanty locks.

Don't use cheap hairpins or combs, they are so liable to drag and break the hair.

If in spite of your own temperament the hair still continues to fall out, it is wise to consult a specialist. A good tonic is necessary, but it must be one specially suited to the case. One that you would select yourself might be just the wrong kind.

The Boston American Pattern

PRETTY WAIST

—FOR A—

YOUNG GIRL

No. 5,772—The over-blouse effects are among the most modish and up to date of the season's styles. The charming design here illustrated is shown in a dainty development of white taffeta over a guimpe of cream dotted net. A graceful amount of fulness is provided by tucks at the shoulders, and the shaped trimming band that outlines the neck and large armholes of the over-blouse adds greatly to the beauty of the mode. Voile, poplin, cashmere, pongee and linen are all adaptable to the design. The sixteen-year size will require 1¾ yards of 27-inch material for the over-blouse and 2⅝ yards for the guimpe.

No. 5,772—Sizes for 15, 16 and 17 years.

To obtain this pattern, postpaid, send 10 cents and the size, name and address to the BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass., allowing one week for delivery.

Widowed by Shot That Avenged Girl, Faces World with 5 Babies

"Gaetani Told Me All About DeSimone Woman, and I Forgave Him; Oh, What Shall I Do?" Weeps Stricken Wife.

By Eleanor Ames.

EVERY story has two sides. On Wednesday I listened to a pitiful story from Louisa DeSimone, whose brother had just been arraigned in court charged with murdering Leonardo Gaetani, whom she says betrayed her.

Yesterday I talked with the heart-broken widow, who had just looked for the last time on her murdered husband's body, as it was consigned to the earth.

If my heart ached for the girl, it was torn with pity for the widow.

Louisa DeSimone has suffered much in three years. First her shame; then the desertion of a husband purchased by money; the loss of her baby; the taunts of friends, and lastly the knowledge that to avenge her wrong, her brother has placed his life in jeopardy.

But she has no little ones to be affected by her position.

If she has no one upon whom to depend, neither has she helpless one to be dependent upon her.

She is young, used to work, and willing to work.

Mrs. Gaetani has, without a moment's warning, been robbed of her protection and support, seen the father of her children laid in his grave with blackened name, and compelled to face the stern side of life, from which she has always been shielded.

"What Shall I Do?" Is Cry of Widow.

When the well-aimed bullet fired by Tony DeSimone laid Leonardo Gaetani low, it robbed a helpless woman and five children, only one of them self-supporting, of their entire means of livelihood and placed a stigma upon the name of a man who, whatever his faults, was a good and loving husband and father.

"What shall I do!" moaned Mrs. Gaetani, her great eyes gleaming, her face drawn with grief, her black, wavy hair disheveled. "I don't know. God knows.

"What good has this boy done by his shot? None, none, only harm. He has shamed his sister before the world, and put himself in fear of death and taken my husband away from me and my five children."

The Gaetani family is of business and social consequence in the upper Italian world.

Leonardo Gaetani had for many years a tailoring shop, which did work for one of the best retail stores in Boston.

He was respected by good people. His home at No. 23 East street, Dorchester, in which he owned a fair equity, is a three-family, modern wooden tenement.

With his wife and children he occupied the lower suite, the rooms all being freshly decorated and well furnished.

"It's a good home, but how can we keep it?" Mrs. Gaetani said, as she looked about. "I have no income. My step-son, twenty years old, will try to carry on his father's business. The others are too young to help."

Widow of Slain Man Had Faith in Husband.

The relations between Leonardo Gaetani and the DeSimone girl were not first revealed to the wife by the pistol shot that widowed her. Little by little, from various hints dropped carelessly, Mrs. Gaetani's suspicions were aroused when Louisa DeSimones baby was born.

"They say it is Leonardo's baby," the gossips told her. "What you think?" they asked, waiting for the effect of their revelation.

And here is what Mrs. Gaetani, devotedly in love, domestic in her tactics, unused to the world, thought. She snapped her fingers, tossed her head and laughed.

"What for you fool me?" she asked. "I know my Leonardo. He is good and loves only me. You do wrong to fool."

And when she saw her husband that night she did not ask him if it were true, but instead told him the story as a joke.

Then one day a letter came, addressed in a woman's writing, to her husband.

"I was not expecting a bad letter," Mrs. Gaetani told me, "and so I ask the man in the top flat to read it.

"'Dear Leonardo,' it said, 'I am so unhappy because I do not see you anymore. Just four walls and not you; it makes me crazy,' and it was signed 'Louisa DeSimone.'"

Mrs. Gaetani shuddered and sobbed at the memory.

"I asked my husband all about it. 'Yes,' he said, 'It is true. I did wrong. I don't know why. I love only you.'

Husband Told Her All And She Forgave Him.

"I asked: 'Why the DeSimone girl? She is not pretty. She is homely?'

"'I know,' he said, 'but she came much to my place when I was alone, and—well I am human.'

"Then he tell me all and cry, cry for sorrow.

"And I—what could I do? I very mad, but Leonardo so good and I love him so and I look at my babies and I say: 'Never again do wrong Leonardo, and I forgive.' After that all was peace, but my heart was cold against the DeSimone girl."

According to the story of Mrs. Gaetani and of Mr. Aita, her brother, who was her husband's partner until he went into business for himself, Gaetani paid the $100 to Louisa DeSimone, and they have her receipt for it, acknowledging it in consideration of marrying Orizia DeLucca.

Afterward, from time to time, Gaetani gave her money for the baby, sometimes $4, sometimes $3, sometimes only $2 a week.

"Sometimes business was dull," said Mr. Aita, who speaks excellent English, "and then he could not afford to pay her when she asked for money. Sometimes I have loaned it to him. Sometimes her mother would come for it, and sometimes her father.

"Her brother used to think a great deal of Gaetani, and Gaetani has made and given him clothes."

The day that Louisa DeSimone's baby died, so Mr. Aita said, she made a scene in the shop, which made everyone aware of the scandal.

Gaetani paid for the baby's burial.

"What Good Has Revenge Done Anybody?" She Cries.

Money was scarce; Mrs. Gaetani was scrimped for funds at home, and she demanded that the payments to Louisa DeSimone stop.

"She has a good job, working for my brother," argued Mrs. Gaetani, "that is enough. Your family needs all your money."

For nearly two years, they say, the DeSimone girl has not troubled them much, and therefore the tragedy came with greater force.

"What good has this revenge done anybody?" moans Mrs. Gaetani, whose grief is pitiful.

"It has only made bad worse. My husband was so good, so kind. He might do wrong once, but he loved only me—me, his wife—and his babies.

"When the children got sick, he call, one, two, three doctors, he worried so.

"And in this cruel way they take him from me! Two months ago I met the DeSimone girl in the building where my husband had his shop.

"'Hello,' she said. I looked at her. 'You have great courage,' I say, 'to speak to me.' She looked ashamed.

"'You must forgive,' she said. I walked past her. My heart was hard.

"Now, through her, my husband has gone, and I am left with my children.

"I have never worked, and how can I go away from my home?

"Who knows how we will live?"

She rocked back and forth and cried silently.

Her youngest child, a boy of five, crept to her, his face white and wondering, and leaning against her reached up and kissed her hand.

A smile made a wan effort to chase away the tears.

"My baby!" she said, drawing him close to her.

Ir Louisa DeSimone has no child for whom to work, neither has she one to comfort her in her sorrow.

ELKS TO DANCE ON ANNIVERSARY

Boston Lodge No. 10, B. P. O. Elks, celebrates its twenty-ninth anniversary by giving a banquet, concert and ball in Paul Revere Hall, Mechanics building, on Wednesday evening, May 22.

BOY ATE CANNED CHICKEN AND DIED

GREAT BARRINGTON, April 13.—Claude H. Hewlett, fifteen-year-old son of Edward Hewlett of Woodstock, Vt., who had been visiting relatives here, died of ptomaine poisoning last night. He had eaten canned chicken that it is believed was tainted.

DON'T WAIT TOO LONG.

At the first sign of Backache or pain in the region of the Kidneys, or weakness and Urinary trouble, the following simple prescription should be used:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

Any good prescription pharmacy will supply these three ingredients at small cost, which can easily be mixed by shaking well in a bottle. This is said to force the Kidneys to filter the uric acids and poisons from the blood, overcoming the worst forms of Rheumatism.

FAIR WE THER IS DUE SUNDAY

The useless little snowstorm of to-day will be followed by a cold night, with fair weather for to-morrow, according to the plans of the weather man.

When Boston awoke to-day it found a gently falling snow outside, not enough to amount to anything, except to make things wet and mean. The mud and slush left over from the last snow was increased a bit by the present fall.

The temperature is moderate, but the excess of humidity makes the air raw.

ASKS U. S. COURT TO END B. & M. DISCRIMINATION

Proprietor of Day's Express Declares He is Refused Rates and Facilities Given Big Competitor.

Alleging gross discrimination against Day's Boston & Somersworth, N. H., express, and in favor of its rivals, Charles J. McCarthy of Chelsea, the proprietor of Day's and a veteran in the local express business, has petitioned the United States Circuit Court for a writ of injunction restraining the Boston & Maine railroad from giving unreasonable advantage over Day's in the matter of rates charged, and in respect to trains and the time of their departure, and from refusing to furnish Day's with facilities equal to those furnished to its competitors.

Through H. W. James, his attorney, McCarthy seeks to-day to have a time set for an answer from the railroad corporation.

Early last September the Chelsea man took over Day's express, which, he says, he immediately proceeded to place upon its feet. He opened an office or two in cities along the route, but it was not until he began to cut into the business of the American express at Dover, N. H., that the Boston & Maine began to sit up and take notice.

On March 4, Day's express received a letter signed by Second Vice-President W. F. Berry, telling Day's that unless it proceeded immediately to cut out its Dover business it would be refused privileges, even as between Boston and Somersworth. McCarthy dropped in to see Berry about the letter and, he says, they had a wordy war, in the course of which the Boston & Maine's second vice told him that the Boston & Maine would put him out of business if he didn't behave.

On Friday, March 8, the "Day" shipments to Dover were thrown from a Boston & Maine express car to the concrete walks of the North Station train shed. There was something like a rough and tumble fight, and two days afterwards McCarthy got a letter from General Passenger Agent Charles M. Burt telling him that with the opening of the present month the Boston & Maine would not grant interstate privileges. Up to this time he had enjoyed the use of a season ticket, issued to express messengers.

"With every dollar I've got," he says, "I propose to find out if the little fellow can be discriminated against in this manner in favor of the big fellow."

CAN'T VOTE OSCEOLA.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 13.—Judge Knappen, in the United States Circuit Court, has decided that the Calumet & Hecla Mining Company cannot vote the Osceola copper mining stock. A preliminary injunction has been granted.

GRAND LODGE K. OF H. WOMAN PROUD OF HONOR

First of Her Sex to Enjoy Such Distinction—Only One Among Over 100 Representatives.

PAST DICTATOR AT HOME

Those secret initiations and signals which accompany a fraternity need no longer be a source of worriment to women, for Mrs. Myrtle M. Currier of Haverhill has just been admitted to the grand lodge of the Knights of Honor as a past dictator. She enjoys the distinction of being the first woman in the country to be allowed to join that order on an equal basis with the men.

The Knights of Honor held their thirty-second annual session at their hall, No. 230 Washington street, and for the first time a woman entered the very innermost sanctum, heard all the secrets, was admitted as a full-fledged member, and also elected grand guardian of the order, which means that she will guard the inner door at all the secret meetings.

Mrs. Currier was the only woman present at the meeting, where over 100 representatives from subordinate lodges throughout New England attended. Mrs. Currier joined the Hannah Dustin Lodge in Haverhill two years ago and was made dictator. When the Knights of Honor admitted women to their local lodges two years ago, the fraternity world sat up and took notice, but it was hardly dreamed that women would eventually be seen in the grand lodge of the order.

Mrs. Currier expressed great pleasure and satisfaction in regard to her election. She said that it indicated a growing tendency on the part of men to trust women, and to look upon them as equals in intellect. She is a pretty young blonde and is popular in lodge circles.

PITTSBURG HAS A '34' NOW, MADE BY CARNEGIE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 13.—Fifteen thousand Pittsburgers pleaded for invitations to attend the great Carnegie banquet, but only thirty-four were the lucky ones. Now Pitsburg is startled—or many of its distinguished citizens are—at what is called the "new 34," which has taken the place of the "28" best citzens who sat down to the Chamber of Commerce banquet a few days ago.

The Pittsburgers not included in the "Carnegie 34" are blue. They cannot understand why a new social number should be chosen, when the other "28" was, in the opinion of other Pittsburgers, a good enough representation of the city's exclusive set.

Among the Carnegie "34" are steel men, newspaper publishers, druggists, grocers, railroad magnates, musicians, architects and city employes. Many former Carnegie partners accepted the invitations and most of them brought along their wives.

PARADE BEFORE GAME AT SOUTH END GROUNDS YESTERDAY, AND RITCHEY OF BOSTON AT BAT, BUTLER OF BROOKLYN CATCHING, AND RIGLER UMPIRING

DOVES AND DODGERS WILL REST TO-DAY

One Won.

By Morton Birge.

We shivered in the April breeze, we shivered at the score,
For Boston had a single run and Brooklyn might get more;
But, play as Boston best knew how, that solitary run
Was all that Boston had to show when all was said and done.

If that had been a single grain of sand upon the shore
It wouldn't have been counted much among so many more;
But when the other team has naught but lemons all the way
Your solitary, stingy run can have a lot to say.

The Brooklynites played hard and fast. It seemed no matter where
A Boston man slam-banged the ball, a Brooklyn man was there;
And when we read the final score beneath the setting sun
The strongest eyes could only find a single Boston run.

The single dollar in your jeans holds mighty humble rank
Compared with what they're stored away within the Savings Bank;
But, if no other person had a solitary sou,
Your single, stingy dollar would look pretty good to you.

The Bostons made that lonesome run so early in the day
That no one in the anxious throng was brave enough to say
That, when the game was over, we would find our team had won,
For lots can happen when your score is hypnotized at one.

A single hour isn't much in figuring delay
The way the trains run nowadays along the B. & A.,
But single runs loom up a heap in telling who is who
When your opponents haven't scored and "one" is marked for you.

And so we shivered and we shook all through the blessed game.
And so the Boston score remained persistently the same,
Although we prayed, as each man hit, that he would bring a run
Our total in the ninth was just that all-forsaken one.

Now Brooklyn might have made a run and doubled it to two,
But that is just the very thing that Brooklyn didn't do;
And Brooklyn has the sorrow now and we have all the fun
For Boston took the starting game by Just that little ONE.

There will be no game at the South End grounds this afternoon between the Boston and Brooklyn National League teams. It started to snow early this morning, and as the indications were that it would be stormy all day, President Dovey and Manager Tenney of the locals declared that there would not be any game.

Catcher Farrell, who hails from Bristol, Ct., and who played with the Augusta team of the Maine State League last season, was sold to the Holyoke Club of the Connecticut League to-day.

That opener was a star event. Everything passed off as if the occasion was made to order, even to the result of the game itself.

It took a lot of playing to beat the Brooklyn crowd by the lonesome score of 1 to 0, but it was the kind of a contest which drove the fans into spasms, being replete with stellar diamond manoeuvres, in which all the expertness of the hardy players was brought out.

The Dove Proved Game.

It was a great test of pulling from the start, and any miscues would have been disastrous and mossed things up considerably. But the Doves proved game to the end, and were able to hold their advantage once gained.

That local baseball following was willing to show the appreciative spirit toward the new owners reflected in the big attendance which bugled around the field and refused to let the raw east wind dampen their ardor.

Distinguished spectators from every walk of life filled the stands, and they saw more than they expected, one of the hardest fought contests that will be played this season.

The result was largely due to the magnificent pitching of "Little Cy" Young, who never placed himself in a better light with the great responsibility of his position resting upon his shoulders and handling the proposition like a master.

Three hits only was the sum total that developed from his delivery, and his steadiness was marked, as he gave but one pass, and that to the first batter, before he had a chance to really locate the plate. He also participated in the most spectacular play when he got in front of the hottest kind of a liner and started a double play under way.

Elmer Stricklett tried all his wrinkles from the spit ball to the rainbow curves, and got by pretty well, barring the breakaway.

He was slammed by Del Howard after Bates had drawn a base and reached third on a couple of outs. It was an auspicious beginning for Howard to bang out the hit which scored the very first run, and that single tally was the whole story of the game eventually.

Maloney Got as Far as Third.

Some idea of the way the team backed Young up was evident by the small number of Brooklyn players to get on the bases. In the first inning Maloney got as far as the third corner, and after that only one of the foe saw second. Just seven of the opposing force had a chance to exercise around the first sack. Alperman, near the close, fastened his bat on one of Young's straight ones and drove it to deep left. Howard got mixed up on the flight of the ball and the batter got the credit for a double, the longest hit of the day.

The turf was heavy for fast stunts, and the ball refused to roll when landing, else the local players would have been credited with some long hits, as they had the right direction. Every man who came to the plate met the ball for keeps, and kept the Brooklyn fielders busy right up to the end.

When the game came to an end the enthusiastic fans rushed over to the Boston bench to get a closer view of the conquerors and would have gladly raised every one of them on their shoulders, as the feeling ran high over the championship form of the home favorites.

NOTICED AT THE GAME.

There was nothing the matter with that start.

* * *

Guess we have a National team worth considering.

* * *

The Hubites are strong for President Dovey. He made a hit at the first meeting.

* * *

It was pretty chilly, but the fans were on time and were bound to see the sport.

* * *

That is the kind of a game that can't be bettered in mid-season, and it stunned the fans.

* * *

The team has the goods this year and no mistake. Barring accidents there will be something doing in the race.

* * *

Claud Ritchey's playing left no doubt in the minds of those present of his rating as a second sacker.

* * *

"Little Cy" was the whole show. That stop he made in the fourth which resulted in a double play will not be forgotten.

* * *

Young making a base hit in the first game! Other pitchers must look after their records this season for sure.

* * *

Only one misplay registered against the locals, and had Tenney taken that pickup in his usual clever way it would not have happened.

* * *

There was a noticeable difference in the throwing of some of the players. Not all were willing to take chances on speed so early in the season.

* * *

Every one of the Boston players wore a piece of crepe pinned on his breast in memoriam of Cosy Dolan.

* * *

President Dovey was obliged to hold an impromptu reception after the game, as many wanted to shake the hand of real ball fan.

* * *

George Wright along with John Morrill was on deck and saw the game at all angles.

* * *

Doc Casey was out-generaled when he failed to cover his base on an short hit to his left and allowed Ritchey to beat him out to the bag.

* * *

Bates seems to be the proper man to lead off. When such a wizzard as Stricklett can't fool him he ought to be able to meet any company.

* * *

Ex-President Soden could not help hanging around the office door. It seemed natural to see the great Hub baseball promotor at his station. The Triumvirate congratulated the new owner on his auspicious opening.

* * *

No one would notice anything the matter with Beaumont's running gear to have seen him hotfooting it to first on short hits.

* * *

Howard was stiging the ball. A hit and three flies to centre field showed the calibre of his sticking.

* * *

Bill Malony knows he is up against it when he faces a southpaw like "Cy" Young, and he went down twice on strikes the only on to fan on his team.

Boilermaker Will Meet Winning Foreigner

JEFF TO DEFEND TITLE

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 13.—At a banquet given by the local baseball magnates last night, at which he was an honored guest, James J. Jeffries, the retired heavyweight champion of the world, reiterated his former declarations that he will defend his title should any foreigner succeed in disposing of all the heavies in America. This statement of Jeffries is taken as being directed at Squires, the Australian champion, who is on his way to America.

Jeffries also denied the stories published in Eastern papers that he is deteriorating physically, owing to heavy "boozing," and says he is in the best of health, and, with six months' ordinary training could be in his old-time fighting trim. Jeffries declared he would fight Tommy Burns for a purse of $50,000.

Harry Baker of Los Angeles writes from Philadelphia that he has secured another match with Freddie Weeks, no date being fixed.

MEMSIC GAVE THOMPSON A FEARFUL BEATING

By Boston American Leased Wire.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 13.—The Memsic-"Cyclone" Thompson affair was not a fight—it was a barbecue. For twenty rounds Memsic simply butchered his hard-headed opponent, and after the fight Thompson's face presented a sickening spectacle. His right eye was completely closed and the whole right side of his face was split open. During the last five rounds he was just able to see his opponent, who had so placed himself by his haymaking that he was unable to land the finishing punch.

There was not a round of the fight which was Thompson's, and the only thing which could possibly commend him was his gameness. The man seems to be part bulldog, part punching bag and part Battling Nelson—in fact, the fight was a replica of the first ten rounds of the Gans-Nelson fight at Goldfield. Thompson was always boring in, leading awkwardly with his left, landing one blow in fifty and stopping everything that Memsic sent with his face. After Memsic had battered Thompson's face until it resembled raw beef the winner turned his attention to the downstairs department and from the sixteenth round on Thompson was just able to toe the scratch and stand there, taking punch after punch. The body blows took all the life out of him, and when the bell stopped the slaughter he reeled to his corner and dropped into his chair, the worst beaten man that ever lasted to the end of a twenty-round contest in this city.

Considerable excitement was caused by the appearance at the ringside of Thompson's wife and little three-year-old boy. Thompson wanted his boy there to act as his mascot, and after the fifteenth round, in which Thompson took an awful battering about the head, the wife stood up and held the boy in her arms that Thompson might see him. The battered fighter looked across and his face twisted into something that might have been a smile.

JUNIORS WON CLASS MEET.

The juniors sprang a surprise in the Harvard class games yesterday afternoon, and won them with 44 points. The freshmen, who had doped out first place for their class, were only good for a poor second, with 28 points, with the seniors third, scoring 23 points, and lastly the sophomores, with 22 points.

DARTMOUTH NINE WON.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Georgetown lost to Dartmouth, 4 to 3, through ragged fielding on a slightly slippery field.

RINDGE, 15; BALLOU, 12.

Rindge Manual Training School opened its baseball season yesterday afternoon with a victory by a score of 15 to 12 over the Ballou & Hobigand nine on Cambridge Common.

OLD COLONY BOWLERS WON

The Old Colony bowlers had little trouble beating the Field's Corner team at the New Roxbury alleys on Washington street. The winners were ahead on each string. This was the rubber game. The score:

HUFF ACCEPTS JOB AS PILGRIMS' MANAGER

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—President John I. Taylor has at last declared himself and has announced that the new manager of the Boston American Baseball Club for the following three years will be George Huff of Illinois. Readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN are invited to read the following sketch of Mr. Huff:

George A. Huff is a graduate of the University of Illinois, of the class of '93, and of the Dartmouth Medical School. He is a massive fellow, jolly and good-natured. His personality is such that he seldom, with college boys, has had to impress his authority upon them. Never considered seriously as a ball player, his judgment of players has been regarded as expert. The Chicago National Club employed him as a scout for young players for this season.

Huff has had remarkable success at Illinois, producing seven championship nines in the past decade. It is greatly to his credit that many of the best ball players developed by him were green and awkward at the game when he took hold of them.

Huff played football at Illinois, and was a guard on the '93 and '94 elevens at Dartmouth, when Fred Folsom, the recent coach at Hanover, was on the team.

Mr. Huff will report to Mr. Taylor in a few days and in the meantime the boys propose to win a game or two. Yesterday's game was postponed on account of rain, but it is expected that the weather to-day will permit of another contest.

LOUIS P. MOOERS ENTERS VANDERBILT ROAD RACE

By J. C. Kerrison.

Another Richmond has entered the field for honors in the coming Vanderbilt road race. It is no less a personage than Louis P. Mooers, the man who designed and constructed Barney Oldfield's Green Dragon, and the man who composed one of the American team in the Gordon Bennett road race in Ireland a few years ago. Mooers has had more or less experience in designing cars, of both a racing and touring nature, and is admitted to be one of the best designers in this country. The announcement that he is building a car for the forthcoming Gordon Bennett may possibly mean the entry of Barney Oldfield for that contest, as both men have been firm and fast friends for a great number of years.

Mr. Mooers is not inclined to give out any details of the construction of the racer, which is well on its way toward completion, but he has said that he thought many improvements were possible in racing car building and that he was of the opinion that the vast majority of modern racing cars are far too heavy and overpowered. He hazarded the prediction that his road racer would make quite a sensation, always provided that it came up to his expectations when he has had it tried out on the roads after it is finished. He said that he has a lot of theories of his own about road racing cars, many of them the result of his experiments with Oldfield's track racing Green Dragons, and that he has great hopes that they will work out all right. Mr. Mooers will not say who he would have as driver of the road racer he is building, but there are a number of well posted automobilists who would not be surprised if Barney Oldfield were to appear as its pilot.

To figure the horse-power of either a two or a four-cycle engine, use the following formula:

$$I.\ H.\ P. = \frac{A \times M.\ E.\ P. \times S.}{33{,}000}$$

In which A is the area of the cylinder in square inches; M. E. P., the mean effective pressure; and S, the impulse-stroke travel in feet per minute. S is found by multiplying the stroke (in feet) by the number of impulses or explosions in the cylinder per minute. In a four-cylinder engine with positive explosions, S will be one-half the number of revolutions per minute. In a two-cycle engine, there will be an explosion in each cylinder for every revolution. Consequently, S equals the number of revolutions.

MANY EVILS FOR WOMEN AND GIRLS IN MILLS

Gertrude Barnum Points Out Wretched Conditions She Found in Fall River.

PRAISES WORK OF UNIONS.

Union labor leaders said to-day that the description of the life of women and children in the Fall River mills which was given last night by Gertrude Barnum, secretary of the National Woman's Trade Union Club, was not exaggerated.

They said that there are just as many menaces to health as were described by Miss Barnum at the industrial conference in Horticultural Hall.

In the Fall River mills Miss Barnum said she found bad air, conducive to the development of throat and lung troubles; so much noise the girls converse with the deaf and dumb alphabet; no dressing rooms for female operatives; danger to health from threading bobbins with the lips and tongue, and to life and limb from the machinery. The habit of continuing work after marriage is bad for the children left at home, often in incompetent hands.

The speaker declared the unions had done much to ameliorate conditions, and are better equipped to improve conditions than any other agency.

"Industry, education and religion solve the problem of human life when taken together, but, taken apart, they simply make life a tragedy." That was the opening declaration of Dr. Graham Taylor of Chicago at the evening conference, which was devoted to "industrial organization."

The Industrial Exhibition in Horticultural Hall will be open to-morrow, closing at 10 p. m.

Whipping the Piano Trust

The Trust hasn't recovered yet from the terrible body blow we gave it lately. Our capturing the 245 new pianos of the Trust's leading makers was a big victory for us. Why—we got in the lot twenty-seven new upright pianos of one of the best known piano makers in the East. These pianos are listed to sell at $450 each. In our swoop of two weeks ago we grabbed them at prices that made the maker, who is in the Trust, wince with pride pain. Early Monday morning we received an offer from this maker of the full retail price on every one of the twenty-seven of his pianos if we would sell all of them to him and none to the public at cut prices. Did we do it? Not so as you would notice it. We threw them all into the sacrifice at prices that proved to the public that we were keeping our faith with the people in our fight. We will give you the advantage of every one of our victories over the Trust and will expect you to investigate our sales and buy your pianos here from us—when we offer you the best makes at prices that you cannot get elsewhere. When we win, you win—Every piano bought here is the swellest kind of a bargain. Come early Monday with your eyes wide open—and see for yourself.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

50 AND 52 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, APRIL 13, 1907

Mr. Roosevelt's Modest Wish

He Desires to Resign Through His Chosen Tool, and Replace Universal Suffrage With Universal Submission to Roosevelt—That's All

You remember when "THE conspiracy" was discovered,
"At which the universal host (of toadies) up sent
A shout that tore hell's concave, and beyond,
Frighted the reign of Chaos and old Night."

You MUST remember that. We mean the GREAT conspiracy, the one that makes of Guy Fawkes a back number, and that makes Benedict Arnold by comparison a patriot. It was a dreadful night in Washington, black spirits flitted through the air with a "drunken Senator" chasing them, hoping to make himself drunker, while a lioness whelped in the Zoo and Roosevelt's spear lost its only brother.

Sable vested Night got into a row with Demogorgon. Rumor and Tumult and Confusion, and "Discord with a thousand various mouths" were hard at it, and Roosevelt, in full view of the reporters, was saying to a natty straw man dressed in a first-class ready-made suit:

"Whence and where art thou, execrable shape,
That darest, though grim and terrible, advance
Thy miscreated front athwart my way
To yonder (convention hall) gates? Through them I mean to pass,
That be assured, without leave asked of thee;
Retire, or taste thy folly, and learn by proof,
Hell-born, not to contend with spirits of heaven."

It was a great day and night, and a great "conspiracy." Loeb had to send for help to help him listen. Crouching Senators were in every White House room, weeping bitterly and saying, "I was not the 'drunken' one, not THAT night. I never said it. I'm a third-termer."

The head of the Smithsonian Institution was figuring how many times Harriman's little quarter of a million contribution would go into five millions, the amount of the "conspiracy" boodle, and toward the end the President was talking Gaelic and writing Sagas with both hands.

At the right moment "good old Jake Riis" dropped in and he told the reporters all about it. He had investigated the "conspiracy" and found it strictly as advertised. The five millions were real Harriman money—the kind that Cortelyou used to get, NOT stage money. Anybody could have twenty-five thousand cash down for saying the country had more than one citizen fit to be President. BUT the dull and common people must not misunderstand the Noble Mind.

The Noble Mind does not want a third term any more than a cow wants four legs. George Washington's provincial ideas are neither here nor there, and Jefferson never climbed San Juan Hill, anyhow.

But the Noble Mind does not WANT a third term. (See Aesop for particulars.)

What DOES the Noble Mind want? Why, ONLY this.

It wants to NAME the next President, and have that dummy obey the Noble Mind's orders.

The Noble Mind, realizing that American government is a failure, and the American people utterly incapable of selecting a President for themselves, is going to take the place, modestly, of some fourteen millions of voters.

It will NAME the President of the United States next time and indefinitely thereafter.

It will CONTROL that man in office, tell him what to think and what to say.

The Noble Mind ONLY wants to be a Lord Protector of this country. It ONLY wants to be the nurse and mentor of eighty millions of childish Americans unable and unfit to govern for themselves.

It wants to imitate Charles the Fifth, who retired to a monastery and governed through his successor.

That is ALL the Noble Mind wants. It has learned in office that IT alone has enough intelligence and conscience to RULE this land, and IT has decided to do away with the primitive foolish system which assumed that the voters had something to say about the President and public affairs generally.

To poor bewildered Fairbanks and foxy Foraker and girthy Falstaffian Taft the Noble Mind says what was said to an earlier rebel against Omnipotence:

"Back to thy punishment,
False fugitive, and to thy speed add wings,
Lest with a whip of scorpions I pursue
Thy lingering, or with one stroke of this dart (brotherless spear)
Strange horror seize thee, and pangs unfelt before."

It is painful for shivery Fairbanks and the others. But it is all good fun for Americans with a sense of humor. To have in one person a combination of Don Quixote, Dowie, Mme. Blavatsky, Munchausen and Braggo the Monk running eighty millions of semi-intelligent creatures, and bullying most of them, is a rich and unusual treat for any philosopher.

When Time tears the Roosevelt page out of History's comic section men will wait a long time for another like it.

HATS

By James J. Montague

IN the earliest Spring that ever was known, when the Mastodon lolled at ease,
And the ichthyosaurus sang in the chorus that swelled from the great Bo trees;
Eons before the Milliner came, or the pompon or slim aigrette
Were culled from the tails of the parrots and quails and sold for two hundred net,
Good wives sewed plaits of the cheapest leaves to adorn their mantling hair,
And the Spring seemed glad to the husbands they had, for hats were made to wear.

BUT women were women even then, and as soon as the flowers came
And made earth gay with a glad array that put the plaits to shame,
They sent their husbands scurrying forth to gather the brilliant blooms,
Which they wore with an air in their slimy hair, resplendent in borrowed plumes.
The husbands sighed as they toiled away, to think these things must be,
And their sighs have grown to a general moan since hats were made to see.

AND now? The flowers of every clime, the birds of a hundred isles,
The beasts that wear their fur and hair in a thousand different styles,
With pumpkins and grapes of assorted shapes, unite in the brilliant crest
Of every woman of every land who seeks to be smartly dressed.
And husbands? They've bid all hope of rest a long and fond farewell,
For hats aren't made to wear or see to-day, but just to sell.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

What you say in your editorial, "The Traction Trust vs. the People," hits the nail on the head. Certainly "the Board of Aldermen should support the reasonable request of the People against the Traction Trust in this matter." To whom else are the people to look for support of a just cause, unless to their chosen representatives? This appeals to me as the most important matter before the Board of Aldermen this year. It will be enlightening to see what is done in the matter.

The Lost Mother

By Wex Jones

HE was such a little funny chap,
As plump as a rubber ball,
And neat as a pin from shoes to cap
As he leaned against the wall.

"HELLO!" I said, and "Lo!" said he,
And "Feeling tired?" said I.
"Nope," was the way he answered me,
But I saw a tear in his eye.

"WHERE'S your Mummy and why are you here?"
Said I to the quaint little chap,
And down his cheek rolled that fat little tear
And fell on the sidewalk, slap!

"YOU'RE lost," said I, "but you mustn't cry,
A great big man like you."
"If 'sa lastery," said he, with a trembly sigh,
M-mummy is lasted, too."

"COME on, old man, and I'll take you home,"
Said I, as he trotted along.
"And next time you feel a desire to roam
See if Mummy will think it wrong."

BUT up rushed a lady and clasped him tight.
"Oh, Harold," she puffed, "is it you—
My lost little boy?" Said the chubby young mite,
"I knowed you was losted, too."

It's Not What We Learn and What We Do, But What We Are, That Indicates Higher Education

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

AMERICAN people are most ambitious for education.

The poorest parents, however uninstructed themselves, are usually ready to make great sacrifices to educate their children.

It is a commendable wish; but it is a pity that so few parents realize the vast importance of laying a foundation of heart education on which to build the mental structure.

This thought has recently been brought forcibly to mind by a highly educated young woman.

She has taken degrees in American, German and French schools, and has acquired all the accomplishments which money can bestow. She is a musician of skill, an art critic of ability, and she has been given advantages of travel and acquaintance with the usages of society.

But alas! Her heart is ignorant of sympathy, and her nature is wholly unawakened to love for any thing but self.

I knew this girl when she was a small child, and I know how many sacrifices were made to give her exceptional opportunities in life.

The foundation of her education, laid abroad, meant anxiety and economy for those who were not rich in this world's goods, but who were consumed with ambition for the child.

Later the fortune of a relative who married wealth "finished" the girl's education. She is fitted to "shine" in any society; but she is unfitted to make any human being happy.

Cold as Ice

HER face is as cold as ice. No ray of sympathy radiates from her.

She is worldly and self-seeking and money is the only God she worships.

Conscious of her early years she unhesitatingly cuts and wounds without flinching, because she desires only the acquaintance of those who can advance her worldly interests.

Education like this is a greater disaster to the individual and to the world than the direst ignorance.

Such a woman can only bring sorrow to others and trouble upon herself.

Unless education refines the nature, and awakens the nobler sentiments, it hardens the heart, and offers larger opportunities for cruelty.

The woman who knows how to be sarcastic and bitter in three languages is more to be dreaded than she who only speaks one tongue imperfectly. Words are swords which need the sheath of kindness.

Before you deprive yourselves of necessities to educate your children try to give them a comprehension of the great culture which lies in the unvarying effort to be kind.

Those two words are very simple, and they are very old. So old that they seem to have lost their meaning for the world.

But they are more important in the forming of character that the word education, as it is generally employed.

True Culture

THERE is no such thing as a cultured man or woman who is unkind.

Education and cruelty can walk hand in glove; but Culture must include kindness of impulse, word and action.

A cultured woman avoids wounding another human being wilfully or thoughtlessly.

She always finds the way to be tactful and considerate of the feelings of those with whom she associates, whether equals or inferiors.

This education of the heart can be given a child by any mother, however humble and poor she may be. Children are merely thoughtless and selfish little animals, until their higher natures are awakened by training. They do not understand the meaning of unselfishness until it is taught them. This is the work for every parent to undertake as soon as a child can reason or understand.

Instead, the average parent accepts the natural selfishness of the unawakened animal nature by urging a child to surpass its companions, instead of urging it to bring out the best in itself.

I knew a little girl who, because she was born as an "old soul," and had passed through many previous incarnations, was abnormally sensitive to the pain of others. She was a brilliant scholar, but seeing that a classmate was suffering with a desire to win the glory of standing first in an examination, the little girl purposely failed in a lesson.

When her parents heard of her failure they were chagrined and astonished. Close questioning forced her into a confession of the truth.

What We Are

"YES, I knew my lesson," she said, "but Molly was feeling so terribly to miss being first I thought I would let her. I As long as I knew the lesson I did not care."

Instead of receiving praise for her unselfishness the little girl was roundly scolded.

The parents were not satisfied that the girl knew her lesson; they wanted her to have the glory of being first. Yet tenfold greater was the glory of such an impulse as hers.

Teach a child that it is not what we know, what we learn, what we do, or what people say of us; but what we are, that means "higher education."

After you have solidly laid the foundation of such an understanding of life's purpose, then begin to rear the structure —the education of the brain.

But that edifice will crumble into ruins when life's great tempests beat about it, unless its mason work of character does live.
